R. McSparran elected head of Inter-State

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

LANCASTER — Robert McSparran, Peach Bottom dairy farmer, was elected president of the 3000-member Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative this week

The Lancaster County dairyman, a long-time leader in co-op activities, succeeds retiring Inter-State head Lester C Jones, a Medford, N J. dairy farmer

McSparran's election took place at Inter-State's 63rd annual meeting held Tuesday and Wednesday at the Host Farm Resort Motel. Other important action at the session in the form of approved resolutions included:

–An increase in membership dues from 10 cents to 12 cents per hundredweight to "help improve Inter-State's equity position."

–Approval to opt out of contributing to the Pennsylvania Milk Producers Security Fund.

–Reaffirming the concept that milk hauling negotiations and deductions be handled at the local level by the individual hauling committees.

–A continued expression of support for the work of the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board

Support for the increase in the dues had been expressed at the meeting by retiring president Jones, James E. Honan, general manager; and Robert Dever, treasurer

The three officials stressed the absolute necessity for improving Inter-State's equity position so that the cooperative could fit into the changing future patterns of cooperative organizations.

Honan told the members that in the Middle Atlantic and Northeast regions he sees new cooperative relationships being analyzed and discussed He reported on meetings and conversations among Mid-Atlantic and Northeast dairy cooperatives and between

Agri-Women conclude week-long convention

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

HERSHEY — The American Agri-Women convention concluded Thursday afternoon following a week of elections, workshops, business meetings and tours of Lancaster County.

Over 200 members participated in the week-long session representing 24 states.

Highlights of the convention included Washington-on-the-line, with AAW members directing questions to foreign attachees; election of the first national officer from Pennsylvania; and one members seemed to enjoy immensely, "The Double Burden of Soviet Farm Women." For more information on the convention see the index on page A32.

A bridge of friendship has been formed between Australian farm women and the American Agri-Women meeting through three "down under" pioneers in farm woman involvement

Lynn Johnson, Wilma Burn and Dorrien Mason traveled several thousand miles to observe the AAW's organization and activities, hoping to carry some idea back to Australian farm women interested in banding together to boost their industry.

According to Lynn Johnson, some 800 Australian farm women did meet for a conference in recent years, but little has been done since. After visiting the United States in 1978 and hosting foreign farm groups at the Victoria dairy operation, Lynn learned of farm women's activities in America. She wrote to a California acquaintenance and was put in touch with California Agri-Women.

Although the three visitors were asked to speak as the impromptu program in place of The Great Debate speakers, who were unable to attend, it quickly became apparent they were a highlight of the sessions and received a standing ovation from the Agri-Women audience Tuesday afternoon.

"Together, women of the world can achieve great things," said Lynn Johnson, who presented AAW president Evelyn Landis with the "Order of the Kangaroo." She called attention to the fact that it was

MacCauley, Greider top District Show

BY SHEILA MILLER

Before tagging the purebred Angus champion, judges Ron Bolze and Lee Wagner selected the MacCauley steer as champion lightweight Showing steers is a new sideline for the Chester County youth who has been showing Suffolk sheep since he was 8-years-old. This was MacCauley's second attempt at raising a 4-H steer.

The steer, called Midnight, came to the 18 acre farm owned by Bill's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William MacCauley at R1 Atglen from the Sam Wylie farm, near Nottingham.

Said Bill, "I made the switch to beef from sheep because I always liked the bigger animals — they're more fun."

They also produce more profit since Lancaster Stockyards, Inc. purchased the steer with a bid of $2 for each of its 1035 pounds — a total of $2070.

What will MacCauley do with this new wealth?

"I'll probably save the money for college," he said, "so that I can study animal

Farm nuisance bills to get extra push

BY CURT HARLER

HARRISBURG — Two bills to protect farmers from outside interference will receive a big push from farm groups Monday when the state legislature reconvenes in Harrisburg.

Meanwhile, chances for any state-funded weather-related disaster relief money look dim.

Both the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association and the state Grange are pushing for passage of HB 1793 and HB 1794.

HB 1793 is one of the top items on the Senate Ag Committee's docket when it meets Monday.

HB 1793 would allow municipalities to establish ag districts and will allow purchase of development easements. It would protect agricultural areas from land grabs by state agencies, notably the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation or Department of Environmental Resources, if those areas were in one of the ag districts having the eight year renewability period allowed under the bill.

Go 'agricultouring' this weekend

PENRYN — The farm of the Barry Haldeman family, along with eight other agricultural operations in Lancaster County, was a beehive of activity last evening and this morning.

The activities were in final preparation for this weekend's tours in which a total of nine farming facilities will be opened by rural folk to their city and suburban neighbors.

Preparations were particularly brisk at the Haldeman farm because it will be the center for an extensive and varied display of 4-H projects and club activities.

But agricultural activities to be viewed will be just as diversified at the eight other locations, ranging from large dairy and poultry operations, horse training and fruit growing to artificial insemination.

Directions to the nine tour locations, which will be open today and tomorrow (Nov. 15 and 16) between 1 p.m. and 5 p.m., include:

Atlantic Breeders Cooperative – 1575 Apollo Drive. Exit Rt. 283 west at McGovernville Road and turn onto Apollo Dr.

Haldeman farm – From Rt. 501 north of Lititz, turn west on Newport Road to Penryn, then north on Gish Road to the first farm on the right.

Lower Hopewell Horse Center – Turn south on Long Lane Road, the first road west of the Rt. 501 intersection on Rt. 322 at Brickerville. Then right on Speedwell Forge to the farm on the right.

Jesse Balmer family – Home of the Lancaster County dairy princess. From Rt. 501 north of Lititz, turn east on Newport Road to the

When is $200.00 less than $190.00?

Do you know what your feed cost is per lb. of eggs or per dozen of eggs on your present flock?

Moyer's offers you the new DEKALB DK "Inflation fighter" layer. A bird eating .21 lbs. of $200/Ton feed will save you 9¢ per 100 hens per day over one eating .23 lbs. of $190/Ton feed.

On a 60,000 bird flock this amounts to $378 a week difference! This could be the difference of profit or loss on your next layer flock.

We've got more reasons to look at Moyer's DEKALB for your next flock. Give us a call.

Ask the Old Farmer: I knew an old sailor long ago who always kept the bottom of his drinking cup covered with rusty nails I often wondered why Also people ashore used to put a quahaug shell in their tea kettles Would you please tell me why? J S, Springfield, Mass

Plenty of old-timers believed that iron was good for a person even in the form of rust Shells in the kettle were to add a little lime to the water and keep the kettle clean

Farm Business News

LANCASTER — A new series of loaders with some first-time-ever features has been introduced to the farm market by John Deere. The first of these new 200 Series Loaders, numbered the 250, is arriving on dealers' lots this month.

The 260 is a high-profile loader — that makes it compatible with Deere front-wheel-drive tractors, from 80 to 130 hp. There is plenty of front-axle clearance so farmers can take full advantage of front-wheel-drive traction in muddy feedlots and elsewhere.

A first-time-ever feature for an agricultural loader — self-leveling — is available Once the bucket angle is set to hold maximum load, special linkages on each boom arm will maintain that bucket angle as the load is raised. Self-leveling will help reduce spills, especially when working with sloppy manure or loose materials And it's quite useful for handling pallets.

The new loader design has made mounting/demounting a "no tools needed" operation that takes just a few minutes. Once parking stands are down, two pins are pulled to disconnect the loader arms from the mounting frame. Then hydraulics are unhooked, and the tractor is free

Lancaster Farming says...

Why we don't need a milk checkoff

The farm community is offering quite a few reasons why dairymen do not need a milk checkoff program

First of all, milk is nature's most perfect food The ad campaigns in the 1960s did such a good job of convincing dairymen that humanity could almost survive forever on a diet of milk products that everyone else must remember and be convinced, too After all, the campaign was only 15 years and one generation of homemakers ago

There is no reason to throw good money into promotion since everybody needs milk Who cares that most orientals and many blacks can't digest milk?

Why should farmers pay for research and development of new dairy products that will be easier for those millions to digest? So what if many caucasians, including President Carter, can't eat cheese? Will they be eating up all that much of the millions of pounds in surplus?

Milk prices are just fine today, so why pay in to a kitty? The industry is safe as long as its good friend, the government, continues to assure an ever-increasing return for producing a product that already is in surplus

Even leaders of giant co-ops like Inter-State have called for lower milk parity percentages to cut supply before the manditory April price review and the big price crash Is it better to cut prices, forcing farmers to produce less, than to build demand?

Some folks say demand for milk is pretty steady regardless of price. Inelastic, the economists call it, despite current sales slippage So why try to build sales by advertising? It only makes those flashy dressers on Madison Avenue richer

Basically, all advertising does for a product is make it more expensive — and farmers must keep milk prices reasonable Ads from those big companies like Deere and IH, Pioneer and DeKalb just increase the prices of their product Telling people about a product's benefits won't encourage anyone to buy wisely

Remember, the dairy business is different than other industries In most fields, many little dealers sell the output of one or two major producers, milk is turned out by many little producers and sold by a handful of dealers Only large producers should advertise, not small ones

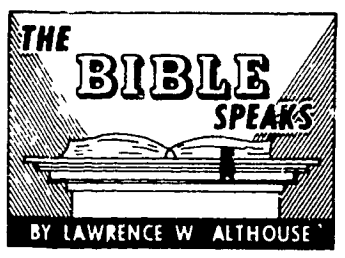
Dairymen shouldn't be obliged to help themselves in a checkoff unless processors and retail outlets pay, too Obviously, the dairy is the big loser when an individual farmer's income suffers since the milk goes for processing

What difference does it make if people see milk as the stuff mother makes you drink for breakfast, while Coke is seen as a fun party drink and beer is the beverage to have at a clam bake or after a hard day's work? Advertising won't help milk's stodgy image Anyhow, it doesn't matter what people think since we know the product is good

Most Pennsylvania co-op officers and farmer leaders are behind the three-fourth of one percent milk promotion checkoff per cwt because they sing the party line Used to be they'd make sure they got their contributions back, but this referendum has no ask-out

If each and every one of those arguments makes sense, vote against the milk promotion referendum If any one, or all of them, sounds a bit wierd, vote for the referendum

After all, dairymen, it's your future



ON BEING QUALIFIED

November 16, 1980

Background Scripture:
Acts 13:13-52;
2 Corinthians 3:1-6.
Devotional Reading:
Acts 26:9-18.

I came into the Christian ministry by the normal route: four years of undergraduate college, licensure by my denomination as a "probationer", three years of seminary, doctrinal examination by ecclesiastical officials, and finally: ordination.

I have not regrets about that route, nor am I in favor of abolishing these and other qualifications for the Christian ministry. Yet, at the same time I am disturbed from time to time that our ecclesiastical system that has been designed to protect the church from an unqualified ministry, has, at the same time, become somewhat of an airtight pressure chamber that keeps out of the church any ministry that does not fit into the system I have no doubt that we need safeguards and order, but I worry that we frequently exchange safety for inspiration and order for God's Spirit.

NOT SELF-SUFFICIENT

We need to be reminded of what lies at the basis of any ministry - clergy or lay. Paul helps us in 2 Corinthians when he says: "Such is the confidence that we have through Christ toward God. Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to claim anything as coming from us; our sufficiency is from God who has qualified us to be ministers of a new covenant " (2 Cor. 3·4,5)

Whatever covenantal ministry any of us have for Christ it is not dependent upon our own adequacy. To be sure, we bring some qualifications to that task; we may be good communicators, we may have an easy way with people, etc. But, although the ministries of Christ need our God-given gifts, they are not wholly dependent upon them. Anyone who becomes involved in ministering to people knows that he or she is sometimes - perhaps oftimes - personally inadequate for the task. Even less are we made adequate or qualified by the education we receive or the stamp of approval which the church puts upon by ordination. All of these may build upon, add to, and enhance, but never replace the only adequacy we ever have: the sufficiency of God. Our education, our training, our ordination - these are but tools, not the source of the power by which we minister.

THE SPIRIT GIVES LIFE

We must constantly be creating and perfecting our man-made systems to help us in the performance of our covenantal ministries for Christ, but, when we have reduced something to an organizational chart, a confession of faith, a procedure for equipping one of Christ's workers, let us not be so arrogant to think that our organizations, confessions, and procedures are equivalent to the Holy Spirit. For our ministry, as Paul puts it, it not that of a "written code but in the Spirit; for the written code kills, but the Spirit gives life" (2 Cor. 3:6).

The first and last qualification of anyone who ministers in the name of Christ is to know, then, that "our sufficiency is from God."

TO PLACE ORDERS FOR NEXT YEAR

Farm planning is very important as a part of good farm management. One of the things that need to be done far ahead of the need is to order supplies for the year ahead. We have only a few weeks left in this year but many agri-business concerns will appreciate early orders. Also, in many cases, cash discounts can be obtained when ordering far in advance of delivery dates This can mean the difference between getting the variety quality, and quantity needed as compared to having to take what is left. I'm thinking of lime and fertilizer, legume, grass, grain seeds, and various pesticides. Spend a little time now in planning and ordering your major needs for next spring It could save you money, and also, make you money.

TO BECOME PESTICIDE CERTIFIED

This is not a new thought but I fear there are hundreds of pesticide users that are not getting certified, or re-certified. The objective is to be sure that all folks using any kinds of pesticide is well acquainted with the material. I find no fault in this effort. However, it is unfortunate that too many folks have made very little effort to become certified, or to get re-certified. This has been possible during the past year by attending an educational meeting in your community, or county, at which the pesticide program has been discussed. We urge users of spray materials to attend one of these meetings in the near future and get qualified to purchase pesticides in the future. If you do not, you may not be able to buy what you need.

TO ESTABLISH FARM SECURITY

Every farmer should give some thought to protecting his or her property from intruders. I realize it is difficult to put every item under lock and key - and this may not be necessary; however, some practices can be established that will discourage those who want to rob or burglarize. I'm thinking of the automatic light that give considerable protection around the farm homested; also, the ownership of a watch dog or two, that will announce the presence of a stranger, or something out of normal. The keeping of gas tanks, workshops, garages, and herbicide storage places under lock and key will make it more difficult for anyone to steal from these places. The locking of loading chutes from barns or feedlots is a practice that needs more attention; a pipe or steel bar across the chute might make it more difficult to back up a truck and steal

PDA helps tomato growers cope with crops

HARRISBURG — "Farmers are versatile," said a Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture spokesmen concerning the future of farmers in the Milton area who this year found themselves with cancelled contracts for their crops.

In February, the fact that the American Home Foods plant in Milton was cancelling all former contracts with local growers of processsing tomatos became public knowledge.

As a result of this decision by the makers of Chef Boyardi products, 163 farmers suddenly realized that their 1640 acres of land, representing 37 percent of the processed tomato acres in the state, would not have a market in 1980.

Instead of delivering their 30,190 tons of tomatos at the door step of American Home Foods, these farmers were forced to look elsewhere for a buyer.

Through the efforts of PDA and State Representative Reno Thomas, a market for 1800 acres of red and green tomatos was lined up with Furmans Canning Company, near Allentown, along with a green wrap packaging operation

Some of the cancelled farmers actually stayed out of the tomato business this summer, said the PDA spokesman, growing sweet corn instead. But many marketed tomatoes to Furmans who took the red tomatos or switched to green wraps, he stated

Currently, PDA is working on the possibilities of these farmers growing alternative crops, such as black turtle soup seeds, mustard seed, and soybeans. They are also trying to secure reliable markets for these exotic crops.

"The only problem with growing beans in Pennsylvania," said the spokesman, "is the climate The beans don't dry down enough and they tend to mold."

One question troubling a number of farmers is why did American Home Foods drop them as processed tomato suppliers.

"I believe they closed the operation in Milton to Pennsylvania growers because our small farms couldn't compete with the large producers in California and Arizona Out there, they can raise thousands of acres of tomatos on irrigated land and ship them East — and their prices are still competitive," said one tomato grower.

In order to protect the tomato growers and other farmers who raise crops, like fruit, grain, vegetables, and hay from the potential economic disasters of lost markets, the Pennsylvania State Grange recently adopted a policy calling for a guaranteed payment to growers. This would be similar to the Packers and Stockyards Act that protects livestock farmers and the Milk Security Fund which protects dairymen.

"As it stands now, if a processing company goes down the tubes, the farmer is left holding the bag. We're calling for a contract between the processor or storage facility and the grower before the crop goes in the ground," stated Dave Weinstock, State Grange Information Director.

Whether this Grange policy will be incorporated into state law will be up to the legisalture In the meantime, PDA is continuing its efforts to help these farmers out of the red — tomatos, that is — and into the green —SM

LMA's annual meeting features marketing

KANSAS CITY, Mo — Veteran livestock marketing businessmen discussing present and future conditions in their industry will be a featured highlight of the 1981 annual meeting of Livestock Marketing Association.

LMA President Gail Sohler said the January 15-17 meeting, to be held in Hilton Head, S.C., will again include the popular "Outlook For Marketing" panel discussion. Nine members of the LMA Board of Directors, from across the U S and Canada, will take party.

This part of the program has proven to be very popular, not only among those who attend the meeting, but with those who read about it later," Sohler said. "I'm sure it's because it features the first-hand knowledge of marketing people who keep a constant eye on changing conditions.

Sohler pointed out that the Directors will discuss a wide range of topics having an impact on 1981 livestock marketing. "This will include total numbers, livestock movement, feed supplies around the country and financing patterns."

The panel will also look at the outlook for businesses in the marketing sector, he said. "What expansions, additions and improvements are on the drawing boards? What new marketing services and techniques will be offered to the livestock industry in the year ahead? The information will come from the people who know."

The Trade Group's annual meeting will also feature the traditional installation of 1981 officers and directors. Presentations and discussions on various LMA industry advancement activities will follow

Amber glass protects cattle virus vaccines

ST JOSEPH, Mo. — When you buy cattle virus vaccines — for IBR, BVD and PI_3 consider the color of the vaccine bottle. It makes a difference, says Dr. Mark Keister, technical service veterinarian for Anchor Laboratories, a division of Philips Roxane, Inc

"Certain portions of sunlight spectrum can kill live and modified-live virus vaccine in clear vials," Keister says "But amber glass filters out the damaging rays and substantially reduces loss of potency "

If you work cattle outside, Keister says, choose virus vaccines in amber bottles.

"Our tests show that a clear vial of virus vaccine left in the sun begins to lose potency pretty fast," Keister explains. "An animal vaccinated toward the end of a multi-dose clear vial may not be protected But vaccine in an amber vial can be left in the sun for several hours and still provide adequate protection."

IBR vaccines in clear bottles can drop to minimum government standards for potency after only 30 minutes of sunlight exposure, according to a recent study by Anchor Laboratories Anchor's IBR vaccine in amber vials exceeded government standards for more than four hours of sunlight exposure.

In the test, eight vials of reconstituted modified-live IBR vaccine were exposed to sunlight to determine its effects on virus vaccines in amber glass and clear glass vials

Anchor tested its vaccine in amber and clear glass vials plus six competitiors' vaccines in clear glass vials The vaccines were tested for potency at 0, 5, 30, 120 and 240 minutes

After 30 minutes of sunlight exposure, more than half of the IBR vaccines in clear vials dropped below minimum government standards for release By the end of two hours, all seven vaccines in clear glass vials failed to meet the minimum government standards for IBR vaccine

In contrast, the amber vial of Anchor IBR vaccine remained above the minimum government standard, and maintained a constant level of potency through four hours of sunlight exposure The amber vial effectively filtered out harmful rays of sunlight and substantially reduced long-term potency loss

Bacterin vaccines are killed-virus products, not as susceptible to sunlight, and don't require the same protection, Keister says

1981 Farm Show to run Jan. 11-16

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania 65th annual State Farm Show will be held Sunday through Friday, next January 11-16.

State Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell said the theme of the 1981 Farm Show will be "Pennsylvania Agriculture - We're Growing Better," in recognition of the tremendous stride being made by the state's farm and agribusiness industries.

"Last year, Mrs. Ginny Thornburgh unveiled the 'Pennsylvania Agriculture - We're Growing Better' logo at the Farm Show," he said "This year, we want to give the public an example of the strength of Pennsylvania agriculture, and let the public see how important agriculture is to their daily lives."

Nearly one million Pennsylvanians hold jobs which are agriculture-related.

"Pennsylvania is the agricultural leader of the northeast, not only in the value of products produced on our farms, but in the important foods system industries which are responsible for processing, packing, transporting, wholesaling and retailing food for the entire east coast," he said.

The Farm Show officially will open at 1 p.m. on Sunday, January 11 with grand opening ceremonies in the large arena of the Farm Show complex on North Cameron Street in Harrisburg. While the show hours are from noon until 6 p.m. on Sunday, the door will be open from 8 a.m. until 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday of the show. The Farm Show closes Friday afternoon at 4 p.m. following the traditional auction of junior market lambs, swine and beefs.

"The Farm Show has shown a steady growth since its beginning in 1917," Hallowell said, "which attests to its strength, and its role as an educational instrument which helps Pennsylvania agriculture continue to grow better."

The displays of agricultural products and prize animals, the farm equipment and machiner at the show, and the farmers who are such an important part of the Farm Show, all give the Farm Show visitor a chance to see first hand the tremendous impact of agriculture on Pennsylvania's economy.

Hallowell said, "We are proud to dedicate this 1981 Farm Show to Pennsylvania's family farmers and agribusiness which form the core of our efforts to economic development in the Commonwealth."

"I saved enough on drying costs to pay for next year's seed."

"That's why I'm ordering these Pioneer® brand hybrids."

Here's the right hybrid for eastern Cornbelt farmers. It has lots of high-yield punch. And at harvest 3535 shells out load after load of medium hard textured, high test-weight grain. It's a real winner under stress of heat, drouth and high population. 3535 is bred to take a lot of punishment and come out on top. This means more corn for you... more money per acre.

3382

Many claims are made about seed corn. Some are sold on promises. But 3382 is sold on tried-and-true yield performance. This new breed of hybrid has proven big-yield potential under modern farming practices. High population and well-fertilized soil really unleash the genetic potential in 3382. It dries fast. Standability is excellent. You'll get your money's worth. Try it.

3184

This hybrid just won't quit when it comes to stalk strength and high yields. There's nothing better than this firmly established leader hybrid in its maturity zone. Farmers really like it around here. It's adaptable to most any soil type or farming practice. 3184 takes drouth and stress. Make sure you include this outstanding hybrid in your planting plans. It's a winner.

science and eventually get into farming."

The reserve grand champion steer was also exhibited by a Chester County 4-H'er. The judges went with the champion heavyweight Limousin x Simmental cross led by Gary Walker of R1 West Chester.

This was Walker's last year to show in 4-H — so the championship with Red, the steer, was a big one for the nineteen-year-old. Walker also led Red to the reserve championship at the local Goshen Fair in August — not a bad way to end a five-year career..

Walker, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Walker, is currently in the electrical construction business since his graduation from Henderson High School. His sale of 1230-pound Red to Lancaster's Watt & Shand Department Store for 87 cents a pound will be a welcomed reward for a year of hard work.

The reserve champion lightweight steer was exhibited by Jeff Walker, also from Chester County. He sold his 1120-pound steer for 78 cents a pound — netting $873 60.Together, these three steers captured the Trio trophy for their county.

The reserve champion heavyweight steer was exhibited by Lancaster County's Michelle Dean. She received 78 cents for her heavyweight's 1195 pounds, a total of $932.10.

In showmanship competition, Debra Greider was selected as the top showman of the day. She was the reserve champion showman at the Lancaster County Roundup on Monday.

Greider, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Greider of R2 Columbia, has been showing beef cattle for the past 8 years.

Her entry this year was an Angus x Hereford x Limousin crossbred purchased from Ken Brubaker. She commented she already has her 1981 project steer, an Angus x Simmental, also purchased from Brubaker

Greider is presently serving as the Red Rose Beef Club's queen Although she was born and raised on a dairy farm, Greider commented that she became interested in showing beef cattle through watching her brothers get their projects ready

"I got interested because I thought it looked like a lot of fun," she said

Through fun, hard work, and determination, Greider has been recognized as the top showman at the District show.

Although the sale of the grand champion did not break last year's record of $2.14 a pound paid for Chester County's Gordon Smith's steer, the sale reflected a lot of local support for the 4-H program

There were 79 head sold on Tuesday afternoon for a total of $72,742.05. The average weight for each steer came to 1156 pounds and the average price was $7959.

There were more than 50 different buyers at the sale, some of whom included Pennfield Corporation, Hamilton Bank, Walter Dunlap & Sons, McCoy Cattle Co , J M. Hoover, Bell Telephone, Kunzler & Co , Baums Bologna, Lawn Equipment Parts, and out-of-state buyers from Virginia markets.

Kaylor is Lebanon's Outstanding Conservation Farmer

BY SHEILA MILLER

LEBANON — This year's Outstanding Conservation Cooperator in Lebanon County is Marvin Kaylor, a North Annville Township farmer. Kaylor was presented with the award here on Tuesday evening during the monthly meeting of the Lebanon County Conservation District

The recognition Kaylor received is the result of over five years of implementing a sound conservation program on his 165 acre farm. Kaylor stated his move to a conservative method of farming was the result of witnessing erosion in his cropfields

After Kaylor purchased the farm from his father, Irvin, in 1972, he farmed some of the sliding hills that had formerly been used as pasture

"I just got tired of dragging wagons over gutters," he said So in 1975, the first of the truly contour strips were laid out on the farm

Since then, a total of 35 acres of strips have been established on his cropland fields. Kaylor pointed out the entire farm has been planned for strips "It's just a matter of working them into my crop rotation over a period of years "

Then, in 1977, Kaylor began to work on some of his low-lying land that borders the old Union Canal bed along the Swatara Creek Over the next two years, more than 12,800 feet of subsurface drainage was buried in the flat, turning the formerly 27 acres into Kaylor's best corn ground

The flats were further protected with the installation of 2150 feet of diversion in 1979 The diversion intercepts the excess surface water that runs down the slopes of adjacent cropfields The runoff is carried by the diversion around the flats and empties into the old canal bed

Kaylor, like many other Lebanon County farmers, experienced a reduced corn yield this year Instead of his normal 100 bushels to the acre, he said he was lucky to get 40 bushels per acre this year But, said Kaylor, he did get 100 bushels to the acre in one field - the flats

"Installing that tile and diversion made the difference of 60 bushels to the acre Without the diversion, it would have been too wet to get in the field this spring to plant the corn

"Figuring corn prices at $4 a bushel, it won't take too many more years for that field to pay for the conservation work "

After Kaylor harvests his field corn in the fall, he explained he either sows a rye cover crop in the strips of stalks or he turns in his 25 commercial sows to glean any fallen corn The strand of electric fence is well respected by the swine, he said "They won't even cross the fence if it goes down, once they learn it's there "

Each year, Kaylor said, he raises about 100 feeder pigs He breeds his sows and any home-bred replacement gilts to purebred boars, either Yorkshire or Hampshire I try to have mostly white pigs," he said

In past year, Kaylor pointed out, he also raised some feeder pigs But with grain prices the way they are, I'm not sure I want to put it into cattle," he remarked

His future operation may eventually expand into a cow/calf rather than feeding setup. "It will all depend on what my son, Brent, decides to do after he graduates from Penn State," Kaylor said.

One of three of the Kaylor children, Brent is a freshman agriculture engineering student at the university The Kaylor's other two children are daughter Cindy, married to Dennis Funk, and son Cliff

Kaylor's wife, Grace, plays a key role in the conservation program, sometimes quite accidentally

"This past summer when things were so dry, my wife and I went for a walk along the diversion She noticed dark green lines running across them and wondered whether that could be the tile lines causing the grass to be so green

"That's what it was alright. And so I marked the tile line with flags Now if I ever need to extend the drainage, I'll know where to tap into the old line."

How much did all Kaylor's efforts to practice sound soil stewardship cost him? After a moment's pause, he said, Probably it cost me somewhere between $9000 and $10,000 - let's say $9500 "

But, as most conservation farmers have found, Lebanon County s Outstanding Cooperator has found that conservation doesn't cost, it pays Through his efforts, he is setting an excellent example for others to follow

Kaylor surveys the conservation accomplishments on his farm in North Annville Township. A diversion and strips ribbon across the sloping farmland, protecting it from erosion.

Fencing his harvested corn strips allows Kaylor to turn his sows in to glean the fallen corn.

Marvin Kaylor, right, receives the plaque for Outstanding Lebanon County Conservation Cooperator from Conservation District Chairman Donald Bollinger.

Grangers ask extension of present farm bill

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia. — National Grange delegates representing farmers from 37 states meeting here this week have called for a one-year extension to the present farm bill due to expire in 1981.

In telegrams sent to President-elect Reagan and members of his Agriculture Policy Advisory Committee, the Grange leaders stressed a one-year extension to allow the new administration time to properly evaluate present farm programs and policies before recommending any changes.

The Grange is the first general farm organization to meet following the recent Presidential election. It is the only farm group still in support of the Russian Grain Embargo. National Master Ed Andersen said this issue will be deliberated further.

However, delegates Tuesday passed a resolution calling for an amendment to the Food and Agriculture Act which would remove the negative impact of future embargoes of agricultural products. The amendment would stipulate that when the President places an embargo on products such as grain and soybeans, the Congress must concur and a minimum 90 percent of parity be guaranteed to farmers during the embargo and for six months thereafter.

The Grange is also continuing their strong support of small family farms by urging legislation to help ease the financial burden of people entering farming.

Specifically, the rural leaders said that the Farmers Home Administration, Extension Service, and other USDA programs should continue to provide increased emphasis on partnerships and other relationships that would encourage young people to enter to stay in farming.

The Grange commended the U.S. State Department and USDA for progress made in limiting textile imports, and expressed support of further efforts which would lead to a permanent agreement They also recommended that the Defense Department's textile procurement policy be structured to supply present and future fabric needs from cotton. They further urged that all producer organizations maintain a loan level that would encourage the production of cotton.

ASCS county employees received particular attention by Convention delegates. The Grange believes these employees deserve employment benefits equal to those received by federal employees such as leave, retirement, tenure, salary and insurance when they might transfer to other non-USDA federal agencies.

The Grange also endorses USDA's efforts to fill vacancies at the state and national level with persons possessing a background in ASCS county offices.

Now Is The Time

livestock. Some attention to farm security at this time might avoid serious losses.

TO CHECK GUTTERS AND DOWN-SPOUTS

Buildings need the protection of gutters and down-spouts to take the water away from the foundation. Since most of the leaves are off our trees, it might be a good idea to clean out these items before we get heavier rains, or melting snow. No doubt many spouts are full of twigs and leaves, which means they will clog and the water will run down against the foundation walls. This will help make wet basements, or could result in water getting into the building. This clean-out process should be repeated several times each year if the building is under or near trees. The gutters and spouts are there for a very good reason; they should be kept open in order to function as planned.

County to receive conservation funds

This is the farm of the Barry Haldeman family, near Penryn, one of the nine Lancaster County agricultural facilities open to visitors this weekend.

LANCASTER — The Lancaster County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service has recently been allocated $65,000 for cost-sharing under the 1981 Agricultural Conservation Program.

This is only a portion of the expected $140,000, however the balance will be available at a later date if the Fiscal Appropriations Bill is passed by Congress. This amount represents approximately the same as was appropriated for 1980.

Pennsylvania also has a target of $472,000 for Long Term Agreements, three to five-year contracts. Part of this amount will be available for Lancaster County farmers who are interested in doing long-term conservation work.

The maximum anyone can receive in one year is $3500 whether completed under a one-year agreement or under a Long Term Agreement.

All high-priority technical practices will be cost-shared at 75 percent of cost These practices include terrace systems, sod waterways, diversion terraces, and water control structures.

Lower priority practices will be cost-shared at between 40 and 50 percent of cost. These practices include establishing permanent vegetative cover, strip-cropping systems, cover crop, and animal waste structures.

Approvals will not be made on a first-come first-serve basis as most people believe. Applications, however, will be approved on each farm according to priorities, depending upon the practice requested and upon the conservation need.

An attempt will be made to solve the most critical problems in order to achieve the program objectives of improving water quality, conserving the soil, and preventing soil erosion and sedimentation.

Agricultural producers interested in the Agricultural Conservation Program shall file an application at the Lancaster County ASC Office by November 28, 1980. Farmers must complete an application before any work is begun.

Roy Mentzer family – Halfway between New Holland and Rt. 340 on New Holland Road In New Holland turn south on Brimmer Avenue. Dairy operation.

Dale Herr family – Four miles south of Quarryville on Rt. 472, turn east on Bartville Road to the farm on the left. Dairy operation.

Carlton Groff family – From Rt. 472 south of Quarryville, turn west on Pusseyville Road, then south on Street Road to the first farm. Fruit growing operation.

Warren Miller family – Home of the Lancaster County Poultry Queen. From Rt. 23, two miles west of Silver Springs, turn north on Bridge Valley Road to the farm on the left.

Preston Newcomer family – Located on Prospect Road between Rt. 283 and Rt. 23 Exit 283 at Salunga-Landisville. Dairy operation.

The tour program has been arranged by the Lancaster County Farmers' Association of the PFA.

Some 50 4-H club members assisted in the preparation and erection of the many displays at the Haldeman farm, which represent the activities of the more than 4,000 members throughout the county.

The numerous livestock exhibits were arranged by the host area Elm-Penryn Community Club.

Many of the 4-H exhibits and displays will show varied activities not customarily associated with 4-H.

These include entomology and oil painting by the Penn Manor Community Club, biking and crafts by the Ephrata Community Club, backpacking, archery, electricity and leather craft by the Mountville Community Club, rocketry and cake decorating by the Mastersonville Community Club, and geology by the Manheim Township Community Club.

Purpose of the many exhibits is to illustrate the diversified activities offered in the Lancaster County 4-H program.

Also, there will be a display on the 4-H International Program In attendance will be the county's two 4-H Queens, Pam Goss, of Conestoga, senior queen; and Renee Haldeman, of Penryn, junior queen.

Visitors to the Haldeman farm will also have an opportunity to view the family rabbitry and even question them about their solar heating experiment in the farmhouse. For about the past year, the Haldeman family has been heating their domestic water with a solar panel system.

And as non-farm visitors travel to the Haldeman farm, they might keep their eyes open for a couple of other "significant exhibits" along the way.

A short distance west of the village of Elm along the south side of Newport Road there are a couple of large orange and black signs. They announce the coming public sale of another agricultural property on Dec. 6.

A bit farther west on the north side of the Newport Road, the small rural hamlet of Penryn even has its typical suburban residential development which has taken a sizable bite out of adjacent cornfields

Just before turning north off the Newport Road onto Gish Road, there's a large historical marker commemorating the original land grant from the Penn family to German immigrant Matthias Gish back in 1733

After all, isn't this also a message worth telling to city and suburban visitors.

They need to be reminded of the extensive agricultural heritage of the land they're visiting, that is all too quickly disappearing in one way or another.

HB 1794, somewhat rewritten from earlier drafts, would assure farmers freedom from ordinances prohibiting normal noise or odor connected with farm operations.

PFA told its members an "all out effort is needed to pass these bills before adjournment."

State Grange Master Charles Wismer said Friday "this is our biggest priority for the remaining session."

Time is the big question mark hanging over HB 1794, as well as several other pieces of general legislation

A section of HB 1794 which would have prohibited the bringing of nuisance suits by neighbors or others against farmers had to be stricken from the bill because the office of the attorney general said it would be unconstitutional to deny anyone the right to bring a lawsuit.

The bill does include protection for certain ag processors. Any processor who produces 51 percent or more of a crop grown on the premises, would be included in the bill's protection.

HB 1794 says any ordinance "defining or prohibiting a public nuisance shall exclude any agricultural operation conducted using accepted practices of husbandry," as long as agriculture is permitted in the area.

The bill was sponsored on the house side by top leadership, including Reno Thomas, Noah Wenger, Paul Yahner, and a host of other ag committee members

It would be almost impossible to do anything in the current session to obtain some sort of disaster relief for farmers suffering from too little rain in the Eastern part of Pennsylvania or too much rain in the Western half.

As with the Agnes disaster payments, a constitutional amendment would be needed. Lawmakers see the present situation as requiring similar action. While widespread, the weather problem for farmers is not an acute emergency like a town losing its water supply, or similar disaster, calling for immediate relief

The big problem facing all legislation now on the Hill is the short time left in the current legislative session. The session ends November 30 Legislators have agreed to meet three days this week. They are undecided on a session next week because of Thanksgiving.

Any bill which does not pass both chambers by then will die.

A revival of the proposals will be possible in the next session when a new Republican majority convenes committees under new chairmanships

Inter-State

local co-ops and those in the Mid-West

But it was reported there was very little official discussion about such co-op relationships at the annual meeting

Dr Paul E Hand, Inter-State assistant general manager and economist, told the delegate body that the Class I price level for 1981 is estimated to increase by $1 00 per hundredweight over the 1980 level.

But he cautioned that a big question mark remains concerning the 1981 Farm Bill and how it could affect the price support system

The newly elected president McSparran echoed these thoughts in stating that his initial priority would be promoting support of a 1981 Farm Bill that retains a sound price support program

He also expressed the concept that a trigger mechanism may be needed in the price support system tied to the supply of milk

McSparran also said that Inter-State will be retaining its position in support of the proposed Pennsylvania Milk Marketing (advertising and promotion) Program

McSparran has been a member of Inter-State since 1950 His milking herd of Guernseys presently numbers 65, along with about 50 heifers

He has served as chairman of the co-op's Executive Committee, on the Order 4 Advertising Agency, the Dairy Council and as president of the Pennmarva Dairymen's Federation

McSparran also will serve as chairman of QC, Inc He is a past board member of the Lancaster County Guernsey Association.

Otther Inter-State officials were reelected, including Daniel L. Martin, R1 Manheim, vice president, and Honan, Hand and Dever

Robert McSparran, of Peach Bottom, Lancaster County, the new president of Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative.

So you want a big rain?

SMETHPORT — When one thinks of torrential rains, he is reminded of Hurricane Agnes, and Eloise of the 70's. But, did you know there was a localized storm in Pennsylvania that made Agnes and Eloise look like an April shower?

The date was July 17 and 18, 1942, and the place was Smethport, McKean County.

A stationary front extending from Minnesota across the Great Lakes, caused the storm to stall in the area around Smethport.

This, coupled with extremely warm, moist air pumped in from the Gulf of Mexico, and a great horizontal temperature contrast in the upper atmosphere, produced 24.7 inches of rainfall, 18 of which fell in four hours.

One unofficial reading, a glass jar located on a farm close to Smethport, caught 30.8 inches of rain before overflowing, with the total thought to have been near 35 inches

Compare this with Hurricane Agnes when just 17 inches of rain fell over a three day period.

With luck, a storm of this magnitude will never hit our area, or what soil we do have left at the top of the hill surely will be at the bottom when it is over, says Lancaster County Conservation District Administrator Thomas L. Johnston.

Just as one plans for major catastrophies such as fire and wind by buying insurance, so too should one plan for the protection of his soil. After all, a barn can be replaced. Eroded soil is lost forever.

For "erosion insurance," contact the Conservation District in your county, in the event that a catastrophe such as the one in Smethport should reoccur.

Walter tops York-Adams 4-H beef roundup

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

THOMASVILLE — Annette Walter captured the coveted York-Adams 4-H beef roundup championship last Wednesday with her 1195-pound crossbred steer. Host for the annual roundup was the Thomasville Livestock Auction, which also held their open house in conjunction with the roundup, after a fire destroyed the old facility in January.

Annette's Angus-Hereford-Limousin cross, "Lobo", was the first 4-H steer on the block in the popular beef sale following the show event After a spirited bidding, "Lobo" went to the Ben Druck Door Company of York, for $1.30 per pound. Peoples Bank of Glen Rock was the contending bidder.

An experienced exhibitor with seven years of projects in the county beef club, Annette had taken the reserve championship during two previous years.

She was also chosen the champion showman in the senior division during the afternoon judging. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Donald Walter, Airville R2.

Reserve champion honors went to Leroy Bowles of Red Lion, with a 1230-pound crossbred. Buyer of the pink rosette winner was Ray Mummert's Eberly's Butcher Shop of Yoe, with the final bid of 90 cents per pound.

Bowles also is an experienced beef club exhibitor and active on the meats and livestock judging teams.

Adams County's championship went to 12-year-old Tim Spangler, with a Simmental-Hereford cross entry. The winner weighed in at an even 1300 pounds and sold to Larry Orndorff, Orndorff Livestock at McKnightstown, for 86 cents per pound.

It was the second purple award for the second-year exhibitor, who also took the South Mountain top placing with his growthy crossbred. Tim is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Spangler, Gettysburg R4.

Kevin Diehl took the Adams reserve placing, with a 1260-pound Hereford, purchased by the Cumberland County National Bank for $1.09 per pound.

Being in the winner's circle is familiar to Kevin, who's won a championship and three reserve spots with previous winners. He's 16 years old and the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Diehl, Fairfield R1.

In the 13-14 years age group of showmanship, Tammy Eisenhour, Wellsville, was named the winning exhibitor. Julie Myers of Wellsville got the judge's nod for showman in the junior category. Judge for the annual roundup was Ken Brubaker.

Cathy Shive of Seven Valleys showed the champion Angus, a 1070-pounder that sold to People's Bank of Glen Rock for $1.30 per pound. Reserve champion Angus was exhibited by Tammy Eisenhour, Wellsville, and sold to Mike George for Lutheran Brotherhood for 86 cents per pound.

In the Hereford runoffs, Ken Sunday of York took the top spot with a 1245-pound entry, bought by Jay's Supermarkets of York for 85 cents per pound. Andy Bealing's reserve champion steer brought the Hanover youngster 79 cents per pound.

Susan Eisenhour of Wellsville took the Simmental championship. Dr. George Kushner, Wellsville, was the buyer, paying 84 cents per pound for the 1210-pound steer. Wayne Stough, Jr., Spring Grove was named reserve Simmental winner, and sold his entry for 83 cents per pound to George Snyder

The 39 steers sold totaled 44,625 pounds and brought a combined sales of $39,134, with an 87 cents-per-pound average.

Following is a complete list of roundup winners:

Simmental - Lightweights: 1. Wayne Stough, 2. Julie Myers; mediumweights, 1. Susan Eisenhour, 2. Jimmy Eisenhour; heavyweights, 1. Jennifer Druck, 2. Tim Spangler, 3. Mike Spangler.

Adams County's 4-H beef champ was exhibited by Tim Spangler, left, and Kevin Diehl showed the reserve winner.

Leroy Bowles' York-Adams 4-H reserve champion beef was purchased by Ray Mummert, left, for his Eberly's Butcher Shop

Corn irrigation meeting set for next Monday

DOVER, Del. — With irrigation making the difference between bumper yields and no crop at all on some Delaware Farms last summer, a lot of growers are interested in learning more about successful irrigation of corn and other agronomic crops.

This year's Delaware Corn Irrigation Meeting will be held Monday, November 24, at the Sheraton Inn in Dover.

Subjects to be covered at the meeting include: the nuts and bolts of irrigation systems - a telelecture by Paul Fischbach of the University of Nebraska; planning your first irrigation system; irrigation of soybeans and small grains; and an update on the Delaware Corn Irrigation Program, with emphasis on management practices which contributed to the achievement of this summer's record 291 bushel yield.

There will also be a presentation of irrigated corn grower awards by Governor Pierre S. duPont IV.

The meeting starts at 8:30 a.m with exhibits, coffee and donuts and adjourns at 3:30 p.m. For further information check with Delaware county agents. The meeting is being sponsored by the Delaware Extension Service.

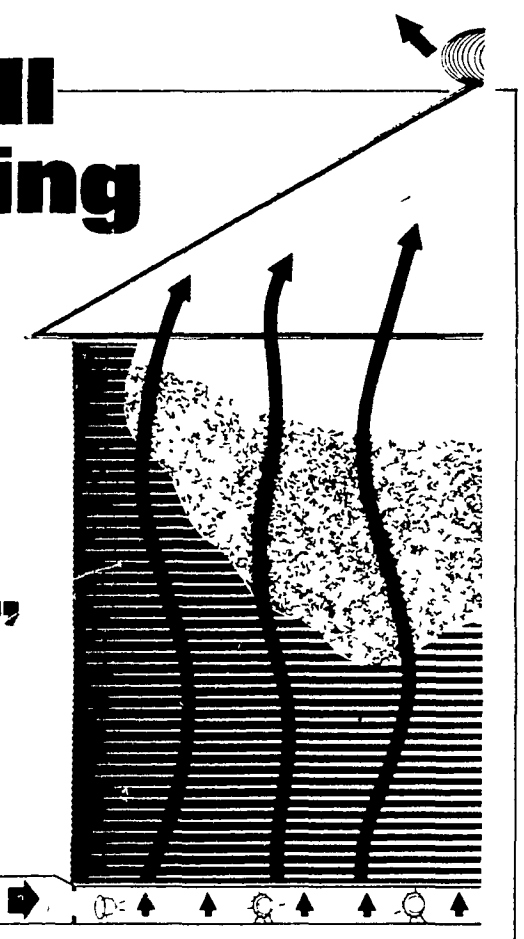
"Harvestall Chillcuring works.

It is the most profitable part of my operation."



GREG ESHELMAN
Mohnton, PA

I really couldn t be more satisfied First of all I like the efficiency at harvest With just two of us working the entire harvest was nonstop

Then the 5¢ per bushel curing cost even included power for installation and our night light

My buyer was quite impressed with my corn Test weight was from 57 to 58 lbs That means I got an extra $300 per 25 ton truck load Even the drivers commented on the good quality

I'm an Ag Engineering student at Penn State, and we do a lot of work with drying systems Out of curiosity I ran the Harvestall design through our computers and found that for the most important aspect of drying air flow the Harvestall bin is the optimum design

Actually the Harvestall is the most profitable part of my operation With better marketing control I make an extra dollar per bushel For the farmer who needs storage or drying the Harvestall Chillcuring system is the best investment I can think of

The Harvestall Chillcuring System

It's simple When grain comes out of the field it's a living seed So instead of destroying the seed with high heat, moisture is removed with natural air ventilation The grain keeps all its feed value, there is less shrinkage than with heat drying because only moisture is removed, not dry matter You'll never see white dust in Chillcured corn You actually save half of what you're used to losing in heat shrink

There's no gas or oil to buy Natural air carries away heat and moisture as the corn releases it

Harvestall Chillcuring is a back-to-basics system that just simply makes good sense Find out more about it

Farm Women

Veteran's Day, and 62 years before, on "the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month, World War I turned to a new beginning; we hope this is a new beginning for farm women."

Lynn's husband is the fifth generation on the dairy operation of 500 acres, with 600 head of Jersey-Friesian animals, 250 of them in the milking string They've also just started a beef operation, with Johnson turning much of the dairy work over to a "share farmer" because they believe that "even dairymen should have some leisure time"

The only crop is pasture, with cattle grazed and grass hay harvested, plus silage put up in bunker-type silos Since weather is fairly mild, building investments are minimal, and overhead costs can be kept low Milk production can thus be made at highly competitive prices with production from cold-climate countries, making Australian dairy products fierce competitors in the world's markets

Due to drought conditions, milk production is down and cattle numbers in the state of Victoria have dropped from 65,000 to 22,000 However, overall production figures have not dipped comparably, since production per cow continues to climb

The Johnson's also have angora goats, which Lynn says is a breed of animal that is rising in value at phenomenal rates Valuable breeding bucks are bringing as much as $48,000

Wilma Burn is also from the southeastern state of Victoria, on the edge of the vast Western plains area, with volcanic soils known for their wool, cereals and oilseed production The Burns operate 5,000 acres, with about 2300 of that owned, and raise primarily oats, wheat, rapeseed and barley A flock of 8,000 Merino sheep, for wool, meat and breeding sales, graze the pasture grasses in this normal 21-inch per year rainfall area

Two sons and a permanent farm employee comprise the farm's staff, but professional teams for shearing are brought in each year for the wool harvest The Merino breed is known for its fine wool, which the Burns sell at an auction Much of the wool is sent overseas for processing into cloth and some returns to Australia as very expensive fabric due to import tariffs

Some of the grains are handled through government mandated marketing boards, like the Wheat Board and the Barley Board Once the grains are harvested, the top graded grain automatically belongs to the Boards, which immediately pay 75 percent of the grain's value

According to the women, though, farmers may then have to wait up to five years for the final fourth payment on their crop, a frustrating arrangement since they must pay cash for fertilizer to start the next year's crop Second grade grains can be sold or used privately by the farmer

Dorrien Mason is from western Australia, on the edge of the "station" country 'Station" are huge grazing ranches that comprise of as much as few hundred thousand acres of the barren, dry outback land

"It's the land of sin and flies," noted the droll Mrs Mason, whose next farm neighbor is nine miles away However, thirty families do live on the little station settlement where the temperature reaches 110 degrees in the summer and becomes extremely cold in winter

Now in the midst of the fifth consecutive drought year, the Masons are in the process of selling all but a small breeding nucleus of their 3,000 Merinos. Crops include 2,000 acres of wheat and 500 acres of oats

"The land in our area has only been opened since 1911 and is still underdeveloped by most standards," she told the American women. A private phone system installed 20 years ago cost $3750 and is frequently out of order from "the wind and the cockatoos"

Earlier in the convention, Dorrien had caught the AAW's attention and amusement with her comment to one panel that she 'could understand the need to limit beef import competition to this country, but don't really know why you're banned the kangaroo hides"

In contrast to the situation in eastern Australia, Dorrien said that women in her area were working through a group known as the Rural Women's Organization, specifically on the "probate" or estate taxing issue

Evelyn Johnson, right, AAW president, was presented with the "Order of the Kangaroo," by Australian farm woman Lynn Johnson.

She cited the test case for changing the estate tax program, a situation where the farm passed, through death inheritance, from the grandfather to the son, then to the wife, and then on to the couple's three sons, in just a few years The sons had to sell the farm and go to work in the city of Perth to help pay the taxes Through legislative lobbying the women were instrumental in having the laws changed

During a follow-up audience question-and-answer session, the three also discussed problems of their country and culture

A growing welfare system, and burgeoning unemployment payments, called "the dole' in Australia, is burdening the country's economy Mining, with large deposits of uranium in certain parts of the country, is beginning to replace the importance of agriculture to the point where the women fear it may "overwhelm farming"

Rural transportation is another issue that concerns the Australian women They are required to use the government rail system, for shipping all wool and grains Farmers attempting to use other methods can be heavily fined, and must even get permits to haul on their own trucks One court case is underway right now challenging the issue

Hoping to more thoroughly organize Australian farm women, they indicated that while rural women have looked ahead, they have not yet really moved far in the areas of community, family life and rural life that need attention.

The AAW convention also had received contact from the Womens' Farm Union of Britain, a similar organization just now forming in England for legislative and farm issue education of rural women

Agri-Women convention convenes in Hershey

HERSHEY — Clutching a giant gift Hershey chocolate bar, American Agri-Women president Evelyn Landis of North Dakota opened the general session Monday to over 200 women from across the nation attending the first AAW convention ever held in the East

Penn's Agri-Women hosted the national confab of farm women at the Hershey Convention Center Sunday through Friday It was the first convention also to host international visitors, with three farm women from Australia taking part in the conference. Governor and Mrs. Dick Thornburgh participated in the convention during Wednesday evening's awards banquet.

Focus of the debates and seminars was on education and critical farm issues, following the theme of "Survival-Success in the '80's."

Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Penrose Hallowell official welcomed the delegates during the Monday luncheon, which featured the state's products, a peach puppet show and introduced the ag department's popular commodity promotional "Agri-animals"

A thought-provoking motivational film opened the keynote Monday session Dealing with the intricate interlocking relationship between the nation's complex marketing system and individual freedoms, the film is critical of government usurpation of personal rights for the good of society

-Three chilling examples of rights-infringement, based on actual case histories, set the tone of the presentation

One documented an Amish farmer, whose team of horses were seized and sold at auction for non-payment of Social Security taxes A second focused on the condemnation of private property in California for the construction of a museum and the arrest and seizure of one individual resisting the property taking A case of Justice Department agents, who burst into a private home searching for drugs, only to be in the wrong house, was the third example

Calling the present rapid slide of the American democracy toward socialism a "humanitarian guillotine," the film's producers press the theme that individuals can solve problems better than the government can, while still retaining individual freedoms

Using fables, the film looked at a theoretical society where humanitarians proclaimed that those with little must be taken care of by those with more through forced sharing

"The more who ate for free, the fewer there were to till the food," went the fable "Then, although the food was free, soon there was not so much anymore And the 'freer' the food, the higher became the taxes."

And the tale concluded, No one gets it if it ain't there".

A panel of representatives from diverse agriculture organizations and government programs then debated the film, one another, and the audience in a lively, and occasionally heated, discussion

Marshall Haws, executive of the Chester Conservation District, moderated the give-and-take session. Panelists were: Dr Hiram Drache, professor of European and economic history at Concordia College; economist H Louis Moore of Pennsylvania State University; Jan Carson, ag employment specialist with the Pennsylvania Farmers Association, Dieter Krieg, dairy editor and native of Germany; Susan Sechler, USDA, and Reggie Egar, agriculture staffer for 19th Congressman Bill Goodling

Food expert addresses AAW members

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

HERSHEY — Who's responsible for the controversial socio-economic-political attitudes toward food production that have emerged to farmers' occasional dismay in the past decade?

That was the question addressed by Margaret Roger, food expert and director of the Food Advisory Board in her "Critical Food Issues" address to Monday's AAW convention meeting at the Hershey Convention Center.

Attacking the notions that current food production methods, using modern technology, are unhealthy and unnatural, she said that Americans are among the "longest lived, best fed societies civilization has ever known."

"The history of 'natural' foods is documented in the Bible," claims Rogers. "It includes starvation, pestilence and disease, conditions we see today in places like Bangladesh and Zimbabwe And who's feeding these people? The USA, using our food science and technology."

Rogers calls the critics of modern ag production techniques "the new class, the upper middle class intellectuals who get most of their information from books with little practical experience and get their power through persuasiveness"

Far too many of them, she warned, are on the staffs of liberal congressional offices and holding positions in offices of agencies like Health, Education and Welfare.

"They're absolutely paranoid about chemicals and bring up cancer as an excuse for questioning everything," she insists, suggesting instead that cancer is a function of old age rather than the result of modern food production methods.

Only through the affluence of society, which does not have to spend 70 percent of its time hunting food like man once had to, says Rogers does this "new class" have the time and money to worry about details of food production

AAW speaker Peg Rogers heads the Food Advisory Board, a group of scientists seeking reason over emotion in food issues.

Sperry New Holland furnished this display at the American Agri-Women convention depicting the history of the American farm wife. This and other displays were on exhibit for the women Monday and Tuesday.

A new breed of cattle maybe? No, just Mrs. Kenneth Stewart, Harrisburg, entertaining the children of the Hershey Medical Center. This was all part of a puppet show presented by American Agri-Women.

LANCASTER — The Mid-Atlantic No-Till Conference, which draws capacity crowds of over 1000 farmers each year, will be held January 8 in Lancaster, with tickets available by mid-November from county agricultural agents in six states

Site of this year's conference will be the Host Farm Resort, five miles west of Lancaster of U.S. Route 30. No tickets will be sold at the door, says general chairman Donald J Overdorff, county agent in Cumberland County

The event attracts farmers from Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, New Jersey, Virginia, and West Virginia.

The speaking program will cover management factors affecting the future of farming, Overdorff stated Topics will include spraying, water runoff, insect control, drought weather stress, and new equipment for planting and fertilizing no-tillage crops.

Morning topics January 8 open at 9.30 with "Spray It Yourself", presented by Donald R. Daum, agricultural engineer at Penn State. 'Chinese Farming. Super-Till to No-Till", will be the topic of William Hinton, farmer from Fleetwood, Pa.

Glover B Triplett, agronomist from Ohio State University, will discuss "Tillage and Agricultural Challenges." S.H Phillips, crops specialist at the University of Kentucky, will speak on "Managing No-Till for the Future."

The afternoon program January 8 will start at 1:30 on the topic, "Stalk Borer Control", presented by Stanley G. Gesell, entomologist at Penn State William H Mitchell, University of Delaware agronomist, will describe "Energy Requirements of No-Till versus Conventional Tillage."

"No Tillage Under Stress Conditions" will be the topic of V. Allan Bandel, agronomist from the University of Maryland.

A panel of farmers will discuss no-till drilling of alfalfa and small grains versus conventional seeding. The panel will include Fred McGillvray of Newville, Pa , E Kenneth Stonesifer of Still Pond, Md., and Bruce S. Berkey of State College, Pa. Moderating the panel will be Lynn D. Hoffman, Penn State agronomist

The Mid-Atlantic No-Till Conference will include displays by numerous seed and chemical companies

Grain supplies tighten, prices should rise

LANCASTER — Because of further deterioration in world crops and continued strong export demand, prices for feed grains and oilseeds are likely to be stronger than earlier expected

Although world grain production is forecast up slightly for 1980-81, this will not offset the 12 percent smaller stocks carried into the marketing year In early October, total world grain supplies for 1980-81 were estimated at 1 61 billion metric tons — down slightly from last year's supply of 1 62 billion

World cotton supplies remain tight as the smaller U S crop has reduced total world supplies for 1980-81 by about three percent from a year earlier

World trade and use of grains are expected to set records in 1980-81, with ending stocks likely to be down around 20 percent from the 192 5 million tons on hand at the end of 1979-80 However, since earlier October, indications are that grain production prospects in the Soviet Union, Argentina, and Australia may have deteriorated If this is the case the world grain supply situation may be even tighter than these lastest figures indicate

Next year's carryover stocks will decline to about 10 5 percent of use — the same tight relationship that stocks bore to world use at the end of the 1974-75 marketing year when the stock/use ratio reached the lowest level of the 1970's

The improved farm prices of the second half of 1980 will offset the lower prices of the first half, leaving average prices received by farmers slightly higher than last year

However, total cash receipts may be up six to seven percent, mainly because of larger marketings Farm inventories of corn, soybeans, cotton, and hogs are being reduced Net farm income in 1980 (after inventory adjustment) is still expected to fall within a range of $23 to $25 billion — down 20 to 25 percent from 1979

Before inventory adjustment, net farm income in 1980 will be down less than 10 percent from 1979

Prospects for higher crop and livestock prices in 1981 indicate a brighter farm income situation, as cash receipts will likely rise more than costs Thus, net farm income in 1981 is expected to increase significantly, possibly recouping all of this year's decline

Retail food prices rose at an unadjusted annual rate of 12 9 percent during the third quarter of 1980, with higher farm prices the major factor behind the increase In the fourth quarter, retail food prices will increase more slowly than in the third, and the year-over-year increase in 1980 is expected to be about nine percent

Next year, retail prices for all food categories are expected to rise faster than they have in 1980, with the overall increase averaging 10 to 15 percent

NCA breaks ground for new headquarters

DENVER, Co — Groundbreaking for a new headquarters building for the National Cattlemen's Assn was held recently in the southeastern Denver area The two-story, 34,000-square foot structure is expected to be completed by December, 1981.

NCA is national spokesman for all segments of the nation's beef cattle industry – including cattle breeders, producers and feeders. It represents aproximately 300,000 professional cattlemen throughout the country Membership includes individual members, 51 affliated state cattle associations, and 15 affiliated national breed organizations. In addition to its Denver headquarters, NCA has an office in Washington, D.C.

The new NCA building will also house the general offices of Cattle-Fax, a cattle market analysis service associated with NCA, and the American National CowBelles, Inc., an allied organization of women who conduct educational and promotional efforts on behalf of the beef cattle industry. Other activities to be conducted in the new office include the Cattlemen's Action Legislative Fund (the industry's political action committee) and the National Cattlemen's Foundation, Inc Additional office space (provided for future expansion) will be available for lease to related businesses.

NCA is now conducting a $4 million building campaign to fund the total project, including land, building, furnishings and associated costs. Financing for the project will be generated entirely from funds raised through voluntary contributions. The campaign is being headed by W R. Farr, Greeley, Colo., chairman, and Pat Wilson, Frostproof, Fla., vice-chairman.

The current NCA facility, located at 1001 Lincoln in Denver, is becoming increasingly costly and poorly suited to the association's work, according to NCA President Merlyn Carlson, a Lodgepole, Neb., cattleman.

"There are a number of advantages to ownership of our own building," said Carlson, "but perhaps the most important is that ownership will release a considerable sum of money, now being spent on rent, for additional direct services to NCA members and the beef cattle industry.

"In addition to the fact that the value of the property at this excellent location will continue to appreciate, we feel an owned facility can be planned and constructed to more adequately meet the operating needs of the association, in terms of space and arrangement."

Attending the groundbreaking ceremonies were NCA officials, representatives of the architect, the financial institution, the general contractor and officials of the city of Greenwood Village and Arapahoe County.

A $2.1 million contract for construction of the building has been awarded to a Denver firm, Brown-Schrepferman Construction Co.

The building will be located on South Quebec St., between Belleview and Orchard, near Greenwood Plaza, and across Highway I-25 from the Denver Tech Center – an area referred to as the "second downtown Denver," because of the rapid growth of office buildings and related facilities in the area. The NCA development will be known as "Greenwood North."

The structure will be built on nearly 3 acres of a 12-acree tract purchased by the association in 1979. Approximately 40% of the original tract is now contracted for sale. The returns from this sale will help substantially in financing the project.

Facilities in the structure will include a meeting room that will accommodate 150 persons for board and other meetings, offices, library, computer center and broadcast production studio.

Hesses have Lancaster Roundup steer champs

LANCASTER — The Lancaster County 4-H Roundup's grand champion steer was shown by Gerald Hess during competition between 72 4-H'ers at the Stockyards on Monday. At the halter of the reserve grand champion steer was Timothy Hess.

Since both steers were Chianina x Angus crossbreds, it would be easy to assume that the Hess boys, both students at Penn Manor High School, were brothers.

But, this is not the case.

Gerald Hess, owner of the grand champion black steer and champion showman at the County Roundup, is the son of Mr. and Mrs Abram Hess of R1 Conestoga. Gerald has been in 4-H for the past 5 years

On Tuesday, Gerald received a calf from the Lancaster Intelligencer Journal for his accomplishments in showmanship the day before. Receiving the beef calf has almost become a family tradition for the Hesses. Last year, Gerald's brother Wayne was the proud winner of the calf.

Timothy Hess, the owner of the reserve grand champ is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Hess, R2 Lancaster.

Tim has been a 4-H member for 8 years.

The reserve champion showman at Roundup was Debra Greider of Columbia. The current Red Rose Beef Club Queen received a check for $300 from the Lancaster Farming Newspaper.

Steers were selected for Farm Show entries by Judge Henry Gruber, A & B Packing Co., Allentown. 4-H members who chose to compete in the January show include:

Scott Augsburger, R1 Reinholds; Sarah Brubaker, Lancaster; Anthony W. Eberly, R2 Denver; Lynn Esbenshade, Lancaster; Bonnie Frey, Refton; John Frey, Refton; Eric Frey, R2 Quarryville; Ernie Frey, R2 Quarryville; Karl S. Pounce approved for use against mushroom flies

HARRISBURG — The Environmental Protection Agency has granted an exemption to the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture for use of Pounce mushroom spraymist to control adult mushroom flies.

The Agriculture Department had petitioned the EPA for this exemption in March on behalf of the mushroom growers and mushroom industry, which has suffered severe losses due to the sciarid fly, also know as the mushroom fly.

"Our mushroom growers have been losing up to 75 percent of their crops due to damage from the mushroom fly in the past several year," Secretary of Agriculture Penrose Hallowell said.

"Foreign mushroom growers, who are not prohibited from using DDT have had an unfair advantage as a result. We petitioned EPA for this exemption as a means to help our mushroom industry control the flies, and after months of work, this exemption has been granted."

The petition represented a combined industry, Penn State Extension and the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture pesticide regulatory effort. Information and testimony in support of the petition were provided by all three groups The use of Pounce under the exemption is being permitted for a period of one year pending the possible granting of a full EPA registration for this pyrethroid insecticide use on mushrooms.

Larval sciarids feed on the mycelium, destroy the pins of developing mushrooms and tunnel in the stems and caps of mature mushrooms. Growers have lost crops because of this, and processors as well have lost money due to the amounts of tissue which is not usable due to sciarid damage.

"The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture intends to continue working in every way possible to assist our $150 million mushroom industry," Hallowell said.

"We have testified before the U.S International Trade Commission on their behalf, and have secured permission to use Pounce Our efforts will continue until we are satisfied that the Pennsylvania mushroom industry can again compete on an even basis with the mushroom producers and processors from other nations"

Pounce, which contains the active ingredient permethrin, has been approved for use under Section 18 of the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act. The specific exemption is for a period of one year through August 22, 1981. The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture is responsible for ensuring all provisions of the exemption are met and must submit a final report to the EPA by January 31, 1982. Application of Pounce must be made by or under the direct supervision of certified pesticide applicators. Details concerning the limitations and use of this material can be obtained from Dr Gerard J Florentine, Pesticide Coordinator.

Hallowell said that because of the one-year limit of use, and the possibility that the EPA may not grant future use of permethrin, the Agriculture Deparment would continue to seek other means to control the mushrom flies.

"The mushroom industry is the leading employer in southern Chester County, and comprises a significant portion of the labor marr[illegible] in Berks and Butler Counties as well," he said. "The industry and the Agriculture Department must work together to insure that we can meet the challenge posed by both natural enemies and foreign suppliers"

Preserve breads carefully

LANCASTER — Breads retain high quality and flavor if special care is taken in preparation for storage.

Jan Renner, Chester County Home Economist, advises homemakers to consider these points when freezing or using frozen bread products:

* Partially baked yeast rolls are handy to have in the freezer. Small rolls freeze best. Bake rolls in a slow oven at 275 degrees F for about 20 minutes, cool quickly, wrap and freeze.

* Cool home-baked breads thoroughly before wrapping Store them in moisture and vapor-resistant materials such as freezer bags or foil When ready to serve, thaw in wrappings 10 to 15 minutes and bake in a 425 degree F. oven for five to 10 minutes, or until golden brown.

* To freeze unbaked yeast rolls made from plain or sweet dough, shape rolls after the first rising, grease all surfaces well and freeze immediately. When ready to use, thaw in a warm place and let rise until light. Bake as usual.

* To assure high quality in baked foods held in freezer at zero degrees F., maximum storage times are two to six months for white bread and plain rolls; one month for unbaked rolls, unbaked rolls, unbaked yeast dough and unbaked quick breads; six to eight months for partially baked yeast breads

Cattlemen forsee changes due to Reagan election

LANCASTER — The recent general election is expected to bring significant changes in approaches to issues which affect cattlemen, Merlyn Carlson, president of the National Cattlemen's Assn , said Tuesday.

Carlson cited prospective changes in both the executive branch and Congress.

The more conservative trend - which is a bipartisan development - should result in less government interference with the free enterprise cattle business, Carlson said. However, it is necessary to recognize that much of the unelected bureaucracy - less responsive to the electorate - will remain in place.

Also, the NCA president noted, a mass of regulations resulting from legislation passed in the 1960's and 1970's will not go away. Even without new government programs, the industry will have a heavy regulatory burden, and this is one of the areas where NCA and its affiliated organizations will have to continue working.

"The new administration is expected to listen more closely to the beef cattle industry on a number of matters important to an efficient agriculture," Carlson said. "We hope to see a more realistic approach to environmental matters in particular - including such issues as public and private land, pesticides and water.

"The Interior Department in particular has been loaded with professional environmentalists who have no practical desire to help keep agriculture strong. This situation should change. More attention will be given to a weighing of costs and benefits, and there should be a more reasonable balance between economics and environmental goals.

"So far as USDA is concerned, President-Elect Reagan has promised to put more producers emphasis back onto the department Assuming this happens, we can look for more emphasis on such things as production research and steps to help improve agricultural productivity.

"Don't look for less attention to such things as food inspection and human nutrition, but there should be a better balance between producer and consumer issues. Human nutrition programs should be based more on impartial science, with less activism involved."

Carlson said it appears that the House of Representatives as well as the Senate definitely will be more conservative. Also, there will be major changes in important committee staff positions in the Senate.

There should be intensified efforts to balance the budget, cut out unnecessary government programs and restrain inflation - which is one of the cattlemen's greatest problems, because of effects on both production costs and beef demand.

In the new Congress, a number of legislative moves can be expected - on such things as tax laws and food safety.

York Farmers Union to discuss dump, FUEL

YORK — Many York County farmers have voiced concerns about the dumping of hazardous industrial wastes in rural areas So the York County Farmers Union will hold an open forum for its members and the general public to discuss this issue.

The Farmers Union policy meeting is slated for 7:30 p.m on Friday, November 21, in the Production Credit Offices at 3301 West Market Street in York.

York County Farmers Union President Albert Bentz said that most of the concern centers around the disposal of toxic waste from industries in York County and abroad.

"Certainly, the disposal of waste is necessary but the farm land of our county is also necessary" Bentz said "Waste disposal sites have cut down on our dwindling acres of available farm land, besides posing a threat to health through leaking and spillage."

A permit for a hazardous waste disposal site has been sent to the Department of Environmental Resources by Stabitrol Incorporated. If granted, the site would be located in North Codorus Township, consuming 15 5 acres of usable farm land Bentz said farmers, and residents of surrounding communities are opposed to the construction of the dump facility.

Residents fear the area's water supply could be in danger since abondoned mines are located in the area. If a leak occurs the mining shafts could tunnel toxic chemicals into underground streams.

Those attending the November 21 meeting will also hear a status report on the York County Farmers Union Energy League Coopeative, which in recent months has been experimenting with straight alcohol as a fuel in farm vehicles FUEL recently filed for a $1 million grant from the Department of Energy to build a facility for the production of alcohol fuel

All members of the Farmers Union and the general public are invited to attend the meeting. However, only current York County Farmers Union members are eligible to vote on policy recommendations

AAW presents Washington-on-the-line

HERSHEY — American Agri-Women looked at foreign trade policies Tuesday during a Washington-on-the-line telephone linkup with agriculture attache's from three foreign embassies.

Special guest "speakers" were Eric Denig for the embassy of the Netherlands and Mario Balava representing Brazil, both linked up through their Washington embassy offices, and Robert Swift, speaking from Chicago for the Australian government.

Washington editor of THE PACKER, and THE DROVERS, Larry Waterman, served as moderator. Three convention delegates representatives, Doris Royal, Julie Hinter and Audrey Sickinger, served as panelists questioning the attaches on a variety of agriculture trade concerns.

One percent of agriculture exports from the Netherlands comes to the United States, mostly in dairy and horticulture products, including the famous Holland floral bulbs. In turn, the Dutch buy some $2 million worth of American farm products, mostly grains, meats and soybeans.

Since land, much of it reclaimed from the invading sea, is an ongoing problem in Holland, AAW representatives questioned the Dutch solutions to another domestic farm worry, land use. According to Denig, their 10 million acres of farmland come under strict zoning laws at national, provincial and local levels.

Dutch farmers operate under regulations telling them which areas can be farmed and under some conditions, even how the land can be used, although cropping choices are theirs.

"Everybody complains about it," commented Denig matter-of-factly. However, since the country is so small, and agriculture so vital to the Netherland's domestic economy, the population has had to accept such restrictions.

Brazilian agriculture attache Mario Belava noted that almost half of his country's exports are farm products, mostly coffee, cocoa, sugar and soybeans, with a large percentage sold to the U.S

Convention delegates, questioning future increases of Brazilian exports of soybeans of the U.S., were assured that shipments of the oil crop are not likely to be boosted much in the next five years. Instead, Belava foresaw a Brazilian cropping program shift in the future toward more needed crops.

Part of that shift could be geared toward Brazil's highly successful domestic grain alcohol production. In 1975, the government of the large South American country plunged into a program of partially replacing gasoline in all vehicle use. After reaching their goal this year of 20 percent alcohol to 80 percent gasoline in motor fuels, plans for the next five years are directed to total conversion to alcohol-burning engines.

According to Australian ag representative Robert Swift, agriculture products exported from his country are vital to the well-being of the rural segment's economy About 90 percent of Australia's wool production, 35 percent of beef and veal products and 70 percent of sugar is sold worldwide.

But Australia's largest trade item with the United States is beef, sometimes cited by American farmers as part of the reason for low domestic beef grower returns. Dairy products, mostly in the form of cheese and casein, are also sent to American markets in fairly large quantities.

Swift criticized the counter-cyclical proposed beef import quotas that would allow foreign meat quantities to rise when domestic production is low in the U.S., and drop when meat supplies were high

"That formula wrongly assumes that other countries will manage their meat production accordingly," argued Swift "It's a policy that may drive our producers out of business waiting for the low cycle to come."

He added that since beef imports amount to only seven percent of total U S., domestic use, the quantity is not large enough to greatly affect American beef producers' prices. However, the three and one-half percent of beef consumption filled by Australian imports represents a full fourth of total production from that company, making it a much needed market to Aussie cattlemen.

In response to an Agri-Women question on the value and possibility of forming a world grain cartel, Swift replied that he would not be in favor of an OPEC-like pricing agreement on grain sales, but would like to see some cooperative method of leveling pendulum price swings. Instead, Swift proposed more international understanding and agreements on grain sales, with consuming countries as well as producer interests represented in grain cooperative pricing decisions

Moderator Larry Waterman, summing up the phone linkage segment, noted that specialty crops show great promise in the United States exporting picture.

Two billion dollars worth of fruits, vegetables and tree nuts has been sold to countries like Japan, Saudi Arabia and Taiwan.

While American fruit growers are eager to sell larger shipments to Japanese consumers, who pay as much as a dollar for a grapefruit, the island's country's farmers have a strong lobby to keep tariffs high on incoming farm goods.

Larry Waterfield and AAW panelists, from left, Audrey Sickinger, Julie Hinter and Doris Royal, quizzed a trio of foreign ag attaches via telephone linkups during a Tuesday segment of the convention.

What about warts?

A reader writes:

What causes warts in beef cattle? What can be done to prevent this problem? Are warts contagious? What can be done to get rid of warts? Are there different types?

Dr. Riegel comments:

Warts, scientifically known as papillomatosis, are skin tumors caused by a virus known as the papova virus.

Warts are generally found in young cattle (under 2 years of age) and can be found anywhere on the animals' body, but are most often found on the head, neck, chin, shoulder, and dewlap.

In order for a wart to develop, a break in the skin is necessary to allow the virus to get a foothold Hence, warts can be transmitted from animal to animal by direct contact to abraided skin. Other means of transmission are by using contaminated tatoo equipment, dehorners, and through rectal exams

Warts will generally go away spontaneously Because of this, they will rarely be seen in cattle over 2 years of age. This disappearance occurs because the affected cattle develop a natural immunity against the papova virus

Outbreaks of warts in a herd can be prevented or kept under control by use of vaccines. Either commercial or autogenous vaccines (vaccines made from warts taken from cattle in the herd to be vaccinated) can be used.

Although vaccines generate good immunity for prevention of warts, experimental evidence shows that once cattle have warts, vaccination does not hasten their regression In purebred show cattle, where a blemish such as a wart can be quite detrimental, the warts can be removed surgically

Like most things in medicine, there is an exception The exception is a growth called the atypical wart which is more broad based in its growth than the regular wart.

Virus particles which are very similar to the papova virus have been found in these growths But, the atypical wart is not transmitted with the same ease as the regular wart, nor is immunity developed to them

Consequently, growths do not regress spontaneously. The only means of getting rid of them is surgical removal

YORK — The York County Society of Farm Women, continuing a tradition of several years, has presented a $4,000 contribution to the 4-H program for use at the 4-H Center near Bair

Marie Smyser, York Farm Women president, presented the check to the youth extension program during the Society's annual convention, held last Thursday at St Matthew Church in York Funds presented to the Center were raised primarily through sales of the county Farm Women's popular cookbook. Under the chairmanship of Susan Lehman, a new cookbook is also being readied

County agent John T Smith, in a thank-you to the three hundred delegates at the session, noted that approximately $24,000 has been turned over for the 4-H Clubs of the county through the collective efforts of the Farm Women societies The spacious 4-H center was constructed a dozen years ago, and even with several ambitious improvements including blacktopping of the parking areas and new kitchen facilities, is expected to be completely paid off sometime next year

During the business session, Susan Lehman, Seven Valleys, was elected treasurer First vice-president Treva Whorl, Glen Rock, presented a condensed report on the activities of the county's 36 individual societies

Participating in a broad scope of service projects and fund-raising events, the three dozen societies contributed an additional nearly $5,000 to numerous charitable and community organizations.

A total of 33 new members were welcomed into the membership during the past year.

During a memorial service, ten former Farm Women, several of them

Grain sales to China may boost Soviet imports

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — A grain export executive said here that the recently-signed agreement between the United States and the People's Republic of China could result in increased grain supplies for the Soviet Union.

Ted Rice, vice president-commodity research, Continental Grain Company, told a meeting of the Crop Quality Council last week that the agreement..."made without consultation with Australia, Argentina, Canada or the European Community, has deeply offended them."

According to Rice, "none has been particularly happy about supporting the United States on the Soviet embargo. This will provide an excuse to ignore it."

Rice acknowledged that none has a big surplus available for export to other nations.

"But," he continued, "if each takes the approach of Argentina, i.e., simply sell to the highest bidder, the Soviet Union will be able to get ample grain. It may mean their taking more barley or sorghum and less corn than they would like, but they can do so if necessary."

In a review of global markets for wheat and coarse grains, Rice indicated he expects record volume in 1980/81

"There are some relatively tight areas," he said, "but world grain supplies are adequate and U.S. stocks are large. A drawdown in stock - especially in the U.S., Canada and Australia - combined with current year production, will be sufficient to accommodate the increased demand."

Noting the increased significance of the market for wheat in the People's Republic of China, Rice observed that Chinese wheat production is down about 10 percent or more than five million tons from a year ago.

"This loss will not be fully offset by increased imports but we do expect imports, mostly wheat, to be about four million tons higher than a year earlier," he said.

He added that the recent US-PRC grain agreement could encourage the Chinese to take more U.S wheat in the first half of calendar year 1981 than they might have without the pact.

charter members, were remembered, with a white carnation placed on a cross of greenery in honor of each one. Memorialized were Martha Dalheimer and Mary Rohrbaugh of Group 5; Florence Hoffman and Martha Smith, Group 4; Eva K. Myers, Group 14; Evamae Houston, Group 1; Annabel Shaub, Group 20; Ruth Burke, Group 25; Mary Gable, Group 9; and Alverta Kauffman.

Several members, their children, and grandchildren entered this year's special state project, crochet competition. First place winners, whose craft creations will go on to compete at state level, include: Stacy Leiphart, children's division; Steve Kohler, painting; Lisa Perry, craft; Anna Eppley, bedspread; Iva Krout, afghan; Betty Jordan, sweater; Ethel Wilt, stole; Mary Hake, baby afghan; Ruth Krout, miscellaneous, Betty Jordan, scarf; Margaret Tyson, pillow.

Featured speaker for the morning session was the Rev Joyce Johnson, who is co-pastor with her husband at St. Paul (Trinity) Lutheran Church, York R6.

Pastor Johnson spoke frankly on the joys and problems she has encountered as one of the relatively few women in the ministry. A 1979 divinity graduate, she was one of only four women in her class, and only six women had been ordained in the Lutheran Church of America up to the time she began divinity training.

"Women in the ministry is not a new thing," she insisted, recalling several women mentioned in the Scriptures as having been involved in the early Christian church.

"And who in the church does the bulk of the work anyway - women," added Pastor Johnson. She encouraged the Farm Women to recognize that women are ministering in many ways, through all the church and charitable groups in which they take part and by providing the organizational structure for getting things accomplished.

Because women ministers are still a comparative rarity, Pastor Johnson admitted that they must be extra accomplished at what they do, and that women in the ministry cannot afford to be mediocre because they carry the responsibility of proving themselves equal to the position.

She noted that she did not set out to become a minister, and actually "fought the call" until it became so apparent that she knew she must trust in God, and "in ways that men aren't forced to trust Him."

Special entertainment during the afternoon was presented by the Hanover American Association of Retired People's kitchen band, a talented group of senior citizens, with members ranging from 67 to 87 years of age, who performed a variety of old tunes.

The performance for the Farm Women was the 293rd for the band, which has entertained at the White House. Following their hour-long light-hearted presentation, they were given a rousing standing ovation by an appreciative Farm Women audience.

Sociologist compares American and Soviet farm women

HERSHEY — Rural sociologist Eileen Nutting compared American and Soviet farm women during her Tuesday luncheon slide presentation at the American Agri-Women meeting, held here at the convention center.

A fruit and vegetable farmer, Mrs. Nutting is a graduate student in the doctorate program at Michigan State University and former state chairman of Women for the Survival of Agriculture in Michigan. As part of her studies, she's traveled to Poland, Czechoslavakia, Belgium, Switzerland and the Soviet Union, researching the roles of farm women.

Farm women everywhere are alike in many ways, she says, in that they all carry dual responsibilities, both working in agriculture and carrying out the responsibilities of homemaking as well. Their contributions to agriculture go largely unrecognized in all countries, but all work close to nature and see taking their livelihood from the soil a "good life"

All farm women, adds Mrs. Nutting, carry a bit of a stigma for being rural, but especially in the Soviet Union society Soviet women carry the double burden of the peasant traditional rural woman, urged to equality in work under the Communist ideology. However, that ideology is not fact.

Only a fourth of the Soviet Communist party members are women, and to even belong to the party, which pleads equality for all, individuals must be invited and closely screened Two-thirds of the women work at jobs of hard physical labor

Mrs. Nutting's research found that Russian women were historically dominated by males, to the extent of some rather extreme cultural customs.

Marriage ceremonies once included a whip, passed from a young girl's father to her new husband to "keep her in line".

A husband could beat his wife and go unpunished However, a wife who rebelled and murdered her husband, for whatever reasons, could be buried alive and left there to die.

Thus, while the present Communist system proclaims equality, diehard traditions still see women ad inferior.

Slides shown by Mrs. Nutting depicted Soviet rural women at work in the cooperative farms, tending the animals, harvesting the crops and preserving food for the use of cooperative members. Child care is readily available, cheap and encouraged by the government, which provides facilities to care for children for weeks at a time if parents desire -J.B.

Eileen Nutting, doctoral candidate in rural sociology, spoke to Agri-Women on the double burden of Soviet farm women.

Order 4 base price set at $13.72

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Middle Atlantic Order Market Administrator Joseph D. Shine Tuesday announced an October 1980 base milk price of $13 72 per hundredweight and an excess milk price of $12.38

The weighted average October price is $13.72 and the butterfat differential for the month is 16 9 cents

The base milk price increased 25 cents from the previous month and is 84 cents higher than last October's base price. The advertising withholding rate, which is deducted from the base and excess milk prices only and not the weighted average price, was 12 cents a hundredweight this year compared to seven cents a year ago

The gross value of producer milk during October was $64.9 million. A total of $569 2 thousand was deducted for advertising and promotion

Shine said that producer receipts totaled 474 3 million pounds during October, a decrease of one percent from the previous month, on a daily basis and 6·2 percent above last October.

Class I producer milk totaled 262 3 million pounds and accounted for 55.31 percent of total producer milk recipts during the month, up from 55.11 percent in September but down from 57 83 last October.

Base milk accounted for 90 92 percent of total producer milk receipts in October, down from 92.32 percent a year earlier

There were 7362 producers supplying Order 4 handlers during the month and the average daily delivery per producer of 2,078 pounds was down 31 pounds from September but was 78 pounds or 3.9 percent above last October There were 160 more producers than a year ago.

The average butterfat test of producer milk was 3.72 percent for the month compared to 3.53 percent in September and 3.67 percent one year ago

Middle Atlantic Order pool handlers reported Class I in-area milk sales of 7 2 million pounds per day during October, an increase of 51 percent from a year ago, after adjustment to eliminate variation due to calendar composition

The new IH WHEEL ADJUSTER makes wheel adjustment a snap

- Modern tractor wheels — with weights and ballast — now can weigh in excess of two tons
- But adjustment is necessary to straddle different row crops and to adapt to varying work situations
- With the IH Wheel Adjuster just one man can adjust wheels almost effortlessly
- All you need is the new wheel mover, a jack, a socket wrench, and a combination wrench
- There's no more need for a work gang to tug, pull, strain, and sweat
- Comes complete with detailed instructions
- Part number 1131915 R1

REDUCE YOUR 1980 INCOME TAX

Take Advantage of Investment Tax Credit and Depreciation Allowance

If you replace an old machine this year you may be able to...

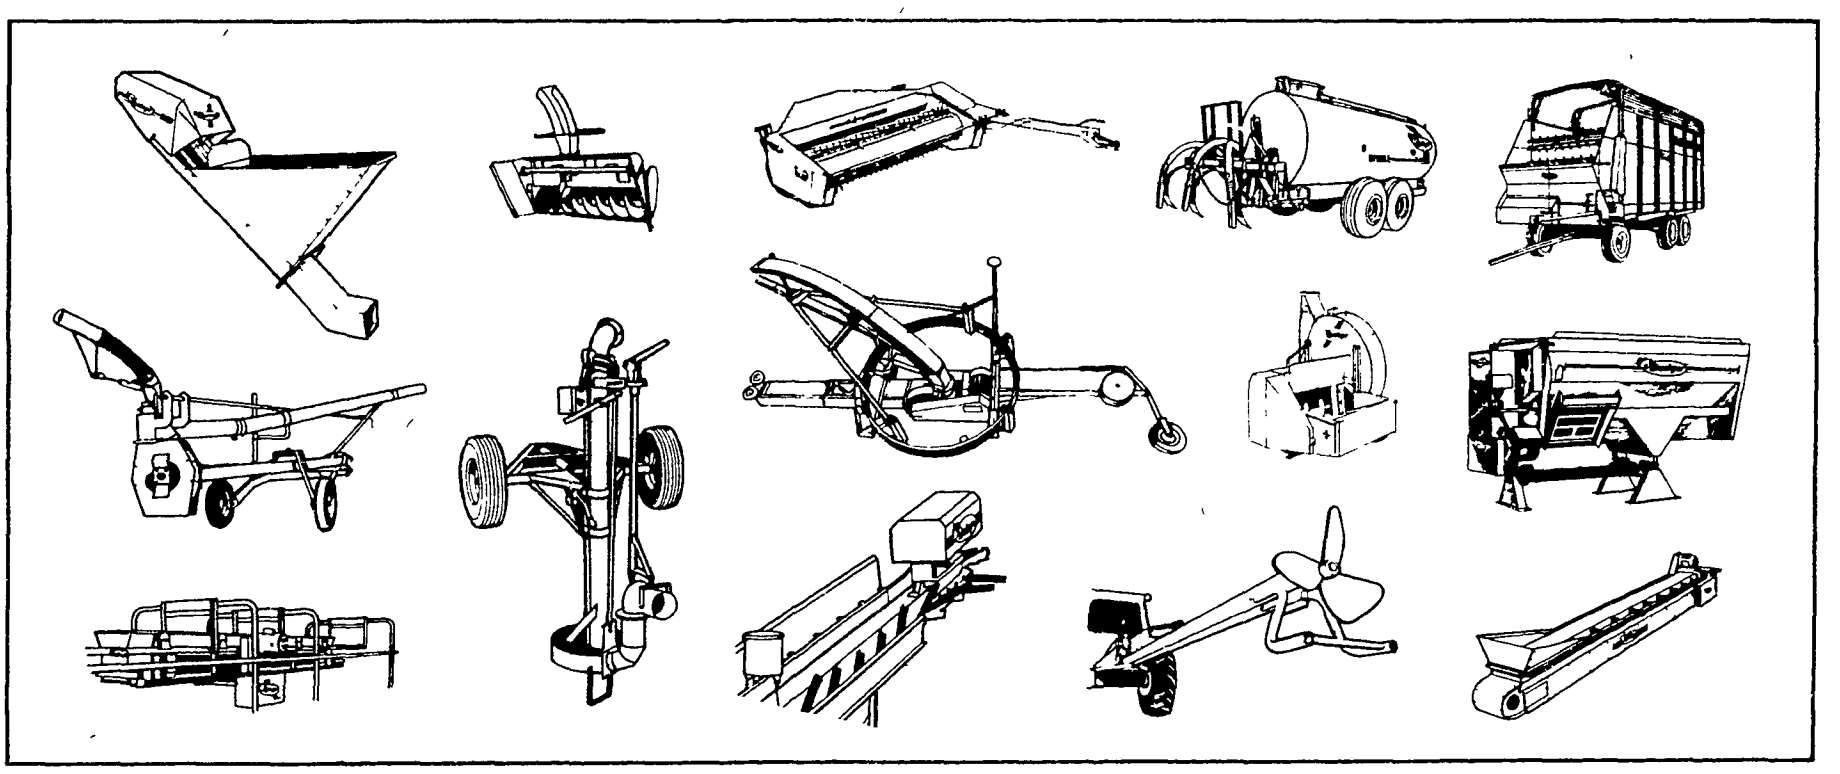
1. Reduce your capital investment by claiming Investment Tax Credit

2. Reduce your taxable income with an additional depreciation deduction for 1980

3. Improve efficiency and production with a new machine.

4. Lower maintenance cost with a new machine

5. Get a higher value on your trade-in.



The investment tax credit will help to reduce your Federal income tax up to 10% of the cost of buying Badger Northland equipment.

Depreciation may reduce your current tax liability even more!

The credit directly reduces your Federal income tax dollar for dollar up to $25,000 and $ 60 on every dollar in excess of $25,000 Any credit which you are unable to use in the current year may be carried back and utilized to obtain a refund of Federal income tax paid in the three previous years The remainder, if any, may be carried forward to reduce such tax in the seven succeeding years

All new and used Badger Northland machines purchased and used in business or for production of income qualify for the credit (Used machines purchased are subject to $100,000 investment limit per taxpayer There is no limit on new machines)

The full 10% credit is available if the machine purchased has a useful life of at least 7 years If the useful life is less, the credit is scaled down as follows

Useful Life	Investment Tax Credit
5-6 years	6-2/3%
3-4 years	3-1/3%

Generally, the credit may be obtained on the total purchase price of the machine If you are trading in your old machine for a new one, some investment tax credit claimed in previous years may be recaptured

Whether the machine is paid for in cash does not affect the amount of the investment tax credit

If the machine is disposed of before its claimed useful life is exhausted, the credit is recomputed and may be wholly or partly recaptured

A combination of the investment tax credit and depreciation could substantially improve your cash flow.

For example

Assume that your joint federal income tax liability for 1980 is expected to be		$18 000
If you decide to purchase 2 new Badger Northland Forage Wagons for $10 000 your tax liability may be reduced by
The investment tax credit	$1 000
The 20% bonus first year depreciation $2 000x36%*	720
The normal double declining depreciation assuming an eight year useful life $2 000x½x36%	360
Total Reduction		$ 2 080
Reaced Federal Income Tax Liability		$15 920

(*Assumed marginal tax rate of 36%)

The example assumes ADR depreciation (1/2 year convention) and a calendar tax year If you are taxed on a fiscal year basis, your liability may be even less

Check with your tax advisor to determine the exact benefits of purchasing Badger Northland machinery before December in your particular circumstances

And that is not all, for you will be able to reduce your future tax liability by claiming depreciation on the remaining undepreciated cost

Farm woman speaks up for farm organizations

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

"I think agriculture is changing and people have started to realize that farms are necessary and important, and have become more concerned about the problems of farmers."

These are the words of Naomi Spahr, one Lancaster County farm woman who believes in speaking up for what she belives in - agriculture and the family farm.

She expresses her beliefs through her involvement in several farm organizations, and although she and her husband J. Robert moved off their dairy farm about a year and a half ago, she finds herself more interested and involved than ever. She explains it by saying she has more time to participate now than when she lived on the farm. They now reside at 2848 Lititz Pike, Neffsville.

Farming is still her number one interest since her husband and son James are farming in partnership And she adds, "In the busy season I helpout in the field." Naomi grew up on a dairy farm and for the 32 years they have been married she has been involved in farming.

Explaining why she speaks out on agricultural issues and why she feels other farm women should, Naomi says, "For too long we have been willing to take whatever they gave us. We need a profit to continue. Men can do a good job as well as women, but they don't have the time. Women take an interest in their business and know the ins and outs as well as a man. As long as women know what they're talking about and can make people understand about farming they can do a good job."

She added that she thinks women are getting involved younger, which may be a reflection of young people farming on their own at an earlier age.

Naomi said she'd like to see more farm wives become active in organizations like Penns Agri-Women, a group which she helped found. She is also a member of its national counterpart, American Agri-Women, and she is enthusiastic about the educational thrusts of the programs of the two organizations.

With American Agri-Women holding its convention in Hershey this past week, Naomi became involved in planning and organization of the program. Speaking before the event, she said, "I'm excited to see things fall into place. We have an excellent program planned, and I'm waiting to see the others' reactions. It is basically an educational convention so we keep favors to a minimum."

One of the few hobbies she has is caring for her "jungle" as she refers to an area of her living room which features a great many plants.

There is one day of touring, the Naomi worked closely with tour committee chairman Marian Brenneman working out the details of the tour to Lancaster County for the approximately 200 people.

Naomi pointed out that farmers' wives across the country have a lot in common, despite the differences in individual operations. "A lot of times we talk prices when we're together," she states.

At one convention, Naomi and her husband became friendly with a farm couple from Washington state who couldn't believe that they could make a living on the 70 acres they were farming at this time. Naomi said, they found that we've learned to use every little corner - it's our Dutch heritage."

She recalls that Penn's Agri-Women got its start on the trip home from an American Agri-Women convention in Kansas City. She was traveling with York Countians Ethel Gross and Gail MacPherson and Naomi relates, "We thought maybe we should start a chapter in Pennsylvania." They did, and she credits Gail and Ethel with the success of the fielding organization.

"It is a coalition of women from other farm organizations. Our goal is to strive for something we all feel is important and to come to a common interest and need. We all work together," Naomi relates.

She said they plan to look at larger issues in farming, and get involved in them "even though something may not be our own problem. We would work to help others," she states.

The organization, formed in 1977, is in its fourth year, but is not growing by leaps and bounds. Naomi says, "It's hard to keep growing. A lot of people think it is just one more meeting to attend. Many farm women haven't found out what we're all about. It's not just what one person wants. We work together. I would like to see more women interested in it."

A member of Farmers Union, Naomi pointed out that Penns Agri-Women boasts members from each of the major agricultural organizations in Pennsylvania.

The Spahrs have been members of the National Farmers Union for a time which Naomi describes as "long already." Although it is not as high in membership as some others, Naomi says, "I like Farmer's Union because women are not an auxiliary, but are a part of it. We go to the state convention as delegates, we have some women as county presidents and we have had some attend the national convention as delegates

"We like their policies. We worked very hard for the milk security fund."

Naomi is secretary-treasurer of the Lancaster County unit and a member of their legislative committee.

She says she enjoys very much working on the policy of the Farmers Union with legislators and others. "I'm still learning, but you do feel you have some say in the system We discuss different aspects of things "

Naomi thinks it's fine that there are so many different organizations with differing viewpoints. "This is the way it should be. If we can discuss and can understand each other a little better, the outlook will be better," she says

She stresses how important she feels it is for farmers to be informed of what happens around them. "They need to know what is happening with their zoning boards. I often attend meetings just to listen and to know what's happening."

How does Naomi keep up with the issues and form opinions? She said, "I read a lot of different publications."

Naomi admits to having mixed feelings about the land use question. "I am concerned about agricultural districts. What will happen when the farmer really doesn't want to be in it? We need a way to keep land in farming, but I don't know how to do it."

She pointed out that Farmers Union policy advocates working at the problem through inheritance taxes and capital gains taxes, much like the suggested Haverstick plan While acknowledging that she feels this plan has

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Hey, know what November is? It's National Farm Wife Month!

I really wonder about something, though. If God had wanted women to be farm wives, you'd think He'd have equipped them differently.

You'd think He might have given them extension arms for gathering eggs, reaching up to a high limb on an apple tree or grabbing for a sow that was halfway out the gate.

You'd think He'd have designed them with broader shoulders for boosting hay bales, bigger hands for washing cows udders and steel-tipped toes for loading steers.

You'd think He'd have stretched their legs just a bit longer for taking bigger strides when chasing escaped heifers and a stronger back for lifting potato sacks and half-bushel baskets of peaches.

But God, of course, in His infinite wisdom, knows best.

He knew farm women would cope, would find a way to overcome their physical shortcomings, would hold their own when needed to help produce food for a hungry world.

After spending many hours this week rubbing shoulders with farm women from across the country, attending the American Agri-Women convention at Hershey, I'm reminded that God has given these farm partners capabilities that outweigh sheer physical muscling.

He gave them determination, not just to work the fields and barns beside their men, but to go forth and become vital spokesmen for their industry, to speak out and work to preserving the way of life which they cherish for their families.

He gave them patience, that extra measure of care to lavish on small children, ailing animals, tender plants, tired farmers, to soothe and smooth tempers and hurts through drought, hail and eighteen-hour days.

He gave them a sense of humor because in His wisdom God knew that almost anything can be borne more easily through honest and shared laughter, whether it be a tractor stuck in the swamp, pigs in the garden, aphids devouring the alfalfa or the bottom dropping out of the grain market overnight.

And He gave them a sense of faith, deepened and sustained through the seasons that roll on eternally, through years of minimal harvests and those of overflowing bounty.

And in November - and always - farm women pause to thank him for always being there to listen to their problems and their cares and for the blessing of working the land in this rich and free America.

Maryland Grangers support fuel tax

THURMONT, Md. — State Grange Master C. Rodman Myers, announced that delegates at the 106th Maryland State Grange Sessions recently passed Grange policy pertaining to the motor fuel tax.

Chairman of the Roads and Transportation Committee, Charles Brauer of Emmitsburg Grange, stated 'while many Maryland residents have reduced consumption and escalating costs have put a slow-down to road construction, maintenance and bridge building, Grangers adopted a resolution to help put more revenue in the transportation budget.

The Maryland State Grange supports a variable motor fuel tax provided that:

The tax not exceed 13 cents per gallon;

The tax not be below nine cents per gallon;

All revenues from the motor fuel tax be set aside for bridge and road projects and maintenance exclusively in the state;

The fuel tax can be adjusted only on an annual basis;

Any change in the tax rate must be approved as a part of the Maryland Department of Transportation Annual Budget;

Any increase in the tax rate cannot exceed one cent per gallon annually;

some merit, Naomi laments, "I don't know how to conserve farmland in an area like this. We've got the potential to grow in industry and the climate and soil is great for farming. I hate to see houses growing everywhere."

It's probably obvious that Naomi is enthusiastic about farming as a way of life. "It's great to raise kids on a farm because they see birth and death and learn the survival of the fittest."

She makes it clear that she is happy to have son James and his wife Judy on the home farm, saying, "We're glad Jim is interested." Her two grandchildren, Jeremy, 4, and Christopher, 2, are growing up on the farm, and Naomi delights in her role as grandmother.

Naomi does the book work for the farming operation, about which she says, "It is my way of keeping my hand on the pulse of the farm." She feels every farm wife should take an interest in the farm and understand its operation against the day of possible widowhood when they will be forced into the position of needing to know. She said American Agri-Women are very strong in urging this understanding.

Raising ten acres of tobacco is part of their farming partnership, and Naomi often helps with the stripping. She laughs and says, "I've solved a lot of problems when we were stripping tobacco."

An active member of Zion Lutheran Church in East Petersburg, Naomi serves on the Dairy Princess Promotion Committee and recently began working parttime at Groff's Farm Restaurant in Mount Joy.

Naomi is president of Farm Women Society 19, a society of which her mother was a charter member. Having joined the Society as a young wife, Naomi gave up her membership during her busy child-rearing years, but decided six years ago to re-join. She said, "I enjoy Farm Women. I joined it for the very reason it was organized - to get out and be with women who have the same interests as I have." She has served as news reporter of the county organization and headed up the committee of ushers for the recent county convention.

With the educational program of the American Agri-Women convention now concluded, there's little question that Naomi will have renewed her enthusiasm for the job of telling the story of agriculture to consumers, to legislators and to whomever else will listen.

With her deep feelings on the subject, she will continue to stay involved in the agricultural community - the place where she feels at home and where she feels a good, secure future lies.

Make room for mushrooms

In this season of holiday partying, it's good to know you can stuff a mushroom without it ever stuffing you.

Mushrooms are actually in a class by themselves. They're elegant, they're wildly versatile (always adding flavor to a dish but never changing it) and they're low in calories - only about 120 in an entire pound - so you don't have to feel guilty after gorging.

Even though mushrooms are appearing more and more for family brunch, lunch and supper, there is still a "company" feeling about them - as though the cook is putting the "best food forward," so to speak. Where did this originate? Probably because there was a time not too long ago when fresh mushrooms were not that easy to come by. Their difficult and exacting growing conditions had not been fully controlled; they were only grown in certain areas of the country, and then only in the wintertime. Now they are available all year round, and throughout the U.S.

When company comes there's always the inevitable question, "What can I serve that's a bit different and will be impressive?"

Now we have your answer. Try some of these delicious recipes.

First is Mushroom-Spinach Strata. Soaking the bread slices in an egg-milk mixture overnight produces a souffle-like texture when baked, and the mushrooms give a meaty flavor - although no meat is actually used.

In Lemon-Mushroom Company Chicken, don't let the longish instructions fool you. It is not difficult to prepare, and it's definitely worth it. The chicken "packages" are stuffed with a sauteed mushroom and onion mixture, then rolled in fresh seasoned bread crumbs, baked for a half-hour and basted with white wine.

MUSHROOM-SPINACH STRATA

1 pound fresh mushrooms
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup chopped onions
8 slices firm-textured white bread
1 cup shredded Swiss cheese
1 package (10 oz.) frozen chopped spinach, defrosted or 2 cups cooked, chopped fresh spinach
3 eggs
2 cups milk

Stuffed crust pizza scores with the hearty of appetite when it is smothered with the delectable mushrooms. And though mushrooms always add flavor to a dish, they never change it, providing only 120 calories in an entire pound.

1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
1/16 teaspoon ground black pepper

Grease a 10-inch quiche or pie pan (1-½ quart); set aside. Rinse, pat dry and slice mushrooms (makes about 5-½ cups). In a large skillet melt butter. Add mushrooms; saute until tender, about 5 minutes. Remove with a slotted spoon and set aside. Add onions; saute until tender, about 5 minutes; set aside. Remove crusts from bread, cut in halves diagonally. On the bottom of the prepared pan arrange 6 of the bread halves. Layer with 3/4 of the reserved mushrooms (cover and refrigerate remaining mushrooms), reserved onions, cheese and spinach. Arrange 8 bread halves overlapping in a circle on top of spinach; place remaining 2 halves in center. In a medium bowl beat eggs; mix in milk, salt, nutmeg, and black pepper. Pour over mushroom-spinach mixture. Cover and refrigerate overnight. Preheat oven to 350 F. Bake, uncovered, until almost firm, about 40 minutes Place reserved sauteed mushrooms in center; bake until a knife inserted in the center comes out clean, about 5 minutes.

LEMON-MUSHROOM COMPANY CHICKEN

1 pound fresh mushrooms
⅓ cup coarsely chopped onion
¾ cup butter or margarine, divided
½ teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon ground black pepper
3 whole chicken breasts, boned, skinned and halved (8 oz. each)
⅓ cup lemon juice
2-½ cups soft bread crumbs
1-½ teaspoons dill weed, crushed
1 egg, lightly beaten
¼ cup white wine

Rinse and pat dry mushrooms. Slice ¼ pound of the mushrooms (makes about 1-½ cups); finely chop remaining mushrooms (makes about 3 cups). Place chopped mushrooms and onion in a clean cloth; twist tightly to extract as much moisture as possible (use liquid in soups, stews, etc.). In a large skillet melt ¼ cup of the butter; add mushroom and onion mixture, salt and black pepper; saute until tender and most of the liquid has evaporated, about 7 minutes, stirring frequently. Remove with a slotted spoon; set aside to cool. Add sliced mushrooms to skillet; saute until tender, about 5 minutes; set aside. Preheat oven to 375 F. Flatten each chicken breast between two pieces of waxed paper. Dip each breast in lemon juice. Place 1 rounded tablespoon of the reserved mushroom mixture in center; roll from the short side, tucking in sides. Repeat with remaining chicken. Combine bread crumbs with dill. Dip each chicken piece in egg and coat with bread crumb mixture; place in a shallow baking pan. Combine wine with remaining ½ cup butter, melted; pour over chicken. Bake, uncovered, for 30 minutes, basting frequently with pan drippings. Heat reserved sauteed mushrooms until hot; spoon over chicken.

Mrs. Karen Snyder, Lancaster

Pizza is not so much an invention as it's an innovation. That's been true ever since the beginning when an Italian baker took remnants of dough, seasoned tomato sauce, cheese, and mushrooms, baked them all together and gave them out to feed the poor.

Since coming to this country, Italians as well as their American innovators have changed the spicing, form and ingredients of pizza to suit prevailing tastes. And innovations continue just as appetites for them abound.

But what pizza is complete without the delectable mushroom? Try this stuffed pizza recipe and remember to pour on the mushrooms!

STUFFED PIZZA

one 10-inch pizza (4 servings)
½ pound fresh mushrooms, sliced
1 loaf (1 lb.) frozen bread dough
Cornmeal
1 pound Italian sausage, cooked, drained and crumbled
1 can (8 oz.) pizza sauce, about 1 cup
2 teaspoons oregano, crushed
1 cup (4 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese
1 cup (4 oz.) shredded Mozzarella cheese
½ cup (2 oz.) shredded Provolone cheese
Green pepper rings
Red pepper rings

Preheat oven to 425°F. Thaw bread according to package directions; divide. Roll half of dough to 10-inch circle. Sprinkle bottom of 10x1 ¾-inch pizza pan lightly with cornmeal. Place dough in pan. Spread with half of pizza sauce. Add half of sausage. Sprinkle with 1 teaspoon oregano. Sprinkle with half of cheeses. Roll remaining dough into 10-inch circle. Place on top of filling. Add remaining pizza sauce, sausage and oregano. Bake 15 minutes. Remove from oven. Arrange mushrooms and pepper rings over top. Sprinkle on remaining cheeses. Bake 5 to 7 minutes

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Recently our church held a retreat at Camp Donegal in York County. It was a beautiful day but my complaint would be that we were not allowed to enjoy it. The theme was "Simplify Your Life" and dealt with three areas: energy, food and relationships. We were kept so busy all day with quizzes, slides, games and discussions that only 20 minutes were allotted for a "quiet time".

However, I did manage to slip and slide down a steep wooded area to a brook which I knew lay below. As I caught my breath and watched the water rushing over the stones, I noticed a yellow leaf floating rapidly downstream only to get caught by a rock and submerged. After a bit it popped to the surface again and went on its way.

I thought it could be compared to our lives as we rush merrily along only to be stopped short at a hard place. And then, by the power of providence, we again rise up and continue on our journey in the mainstream of life.

While I was away for the day, Cindy was also away for the day. She took the SAT test in the morning for the second time as some colleges require it.

In the afternoon she was at her school's football game as a member of the marching band and in the evening she went to the Hershey Stadium to compete in the Cavalcade of Bands. Here her group won their eighth straight first place victory. It was a crowning accomplishment for her senior year and came after many, many months of practice. It definitely called for a party to celebrate

In anticipation, she has prepared pizzas the night before and after the dough had risen she pre-baked them and then froze them. Other snack foods and drinks were purchased but at the last moment the refreshments and the place of the party were moved to another home as they had "a stereo and a ping-pong table".

We expected to find our house "jumping" when we came from square dancing but all was quiet and a note explained the change.

STUFFED MUSHROOMS PROVENCALE

5 small tomatoes (1-½ lb.) or 1 can (28 oz.) whole tomatoes
3 tablespoons butter or margarine, divided
½ cup chopped onion
1 garlic clove, crushed
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon oregano leaves, crushed
Pinch ground black pepper
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
1 pound medium-sized fresh mushrooms

If using fresh tomatoes blanch in boiling water; rinse with cold water; peel. Cut tomatoes into quarters; remove seeds. Coarsely chop tomatoes (makes 1-½ cups). Or, drain canned tomatoes, remove seeds and chop; set tomatoes aside. In a medium saucepan melt 1 tablespoon of the butter. Add onion; saute until tender; about 5 minutes. Add garlic; saute for 1 minute. Stir in salt, oregano, black pepper and reserved tomatoes. Simmer, uncovered, until mixture thickens, about 25 minutes, stirring often. Remove from heat. Junior Cooking Edition

Juniors, following the recipes is the list of words we promised from last week's issue. If you missed that issue you may still want to try our game. Find as many words as you can in Lancaster Farming. If you find 25 or more - you're a real winner and if you find any we didn't list - you're an automatic winner!

Here's a good idea for play during the winter months; how about making some jigsaw puzzles? They're perfect for play indoors.

What you need: a favorite picture from a magazine or maybe a picture (one that has been enlarged) of your pet; clear contact paper (optional); a pencil and a pair of scissors; rubber cement; a box or large envelope to keep it in.

First glue the picture smoothly to the cardboard. You can use another glue such as Elmer's glue but for best results use rubber cement.

Next make the picture durable by contacting both sides of the picture.

On the cardboard side, draw some irregularly sized shapes and then cut them out Scramble them up and try to put them back together.

You may want to decorate your box by drawing the picture of the puzzle on the front so you can tell at a glance which puzzle is in which box

Why not make your friends some for Christmas? They'll love them. This will also make the rubber cement and contact paper worth purchasing

Now for our recipes. This week we have some wonderful after-school drinks for you to try and a special treat called yum-yum.

Ladies Have You Heard?

By Doris Thomas
Lancaster Extension Home Economist

MONEY MARKET FUNDS MAY HELP PROTECT PURCHASING POWER

With inflation likely to continue in the double digit range for some time, you and your family may wonder if there are ways to protect the purchasing power of your short-term savings.

Your best bet is to get as high an interest rate on your savings as possible One place to get these higher rates is in money market funds

A money market fund is one type of mutual fund. You invest in such a fund by buying shares in it. The money in a money market is invested in a variety of short-term government and business bonds and other forms of short term debt. Short term bonds and debt must pay the current high interest rate, which you, the fund owner, then receive.

Unlike savings accounts or certificates of deposit, money market funds have no fixed interest rate But the rate is usually several percentage points higher. So, while the interest compounds at the maximum rate - it is computed and credited daily to your account - the actual rate may vary from day to day and week to week.

Money market funds are especially good protection when the rate of inflation is rising When prices go up, interest - which is the price of money - will rise and so will the interest income on your money market fund.

You can withdraw what you have invested, with no loss of interest, at any time In fact, many money market funds include check writing privileges for checks over $500.

Your minimum starting investment will most often be in the $1,000 range, but a few funds require only $300 to $500. Some accounts require that additional investments be in amounts no less than $100; others allow additional investments as low as $25. There is rarely a sales fee or charge for investing [illegible] market funds are not insured like a bank account, but if you deal with a firm that has an established reputation, the risk is low As with other securities, money market funds are regulated by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

You can get information on money market funds from security dealers in your area. Requesting information does not commit you to purchase.

You can also buy by mail. Check the financial page of your newspaper for advertisements Most money market funds have toll free numbers through which you can request information about the fund, and make arrangements to invest.

OLD AGE DOESN'T EQUAL POOR HEALTH

When you feel good, life is good. In fact, good health is consistently linked with happiness and satisfaction in later life.

Good health means you can be more active and independent But many older adults let diseases and other health problems go untreated because they assume the way they feel is just part of "growing old".

Recent studies make it easier to distinguish between changes due to normal aging and changes caused by disease. Knowing what to expect, and being aware of some diseases common to older adults can help you maintain the best possible health

As part of its Family After Forty Series, The Pennsylvania State University's Cooperative Extension Service has produced a pamphlet entitled "Physical Well Being." It can help you recognize the physical changes that occur in different body systems as part of the normal aging process, those diseases common in later life, and preventive health measures The pamphlet also talks about ways to cope if disability does occur.

You can get a free copy of "Physical Well Being" along with the other five pamphlets in the Family After Forty Series by contacting the Lancaster County Cooperative Extension Service, 1383 Arcadia Road, Lancaster, PA 17601.

Egg group to offer promo signs

MAYTOWN — Trucks can be moving billboards for free advertising, but only when properly signed.

To encourage use of Incredible Edible Egg truck logos, the American Egg Board is offering a half-price promotion of durable, all-weather plastic four-color logos.

AEB noted that the logos are excellent ads when displayed on vans, straights, semi-trailers and even company cars.

The impact would be phenominal if every vehicle in the egg industry displayed the dynamic egg-in-hand logo to promote versatile and nutritious eggs. Literally thousands of consumers would be reached every day, everytime egg trucks are on their delivery routes. And the billboard-on-wheels space is virtually free.

The logos are valuable decorative elements on the sides and tailgates, especially when coordinated with the company name and address. They dress up the appearance of vehicles while projecting an advertising message. They also make attractive stationary signs for farm entrances and other locations.

New prices for the easily installed, pressure sensitive logos are: 56x48-inch $13.50; 42x36-inch $9; 22x18-inch $3.75, and 14x12-inch $3. The offer is on a first-come, first-served basis as long as current supplies last. For information or to order, write the American Egg Board, 1460 Renaissance Dr., Park Ridge, Ill. 60068.

Cold, wet weather slows world harvest

LANCASTER — The onset of colder weather and continued rain in many areas continue to affect global harvest activities and crop development, according to a weekly report issued today by the Joint Agricultural Weather Facility of the U.S. Departments of Commerce and Agriculture. Wet weather is helping crop development in several Southern Hemisphere regions.

Highlights of the report follow.

United States. A storm which spread snow from Nebraska to northern Illinois kept fields in parts of the Corn Belt too wet last week for much harvest progress. In parts of the Wheat Belt, however, the dampness had a beneficial effect and further improved growing conditions.

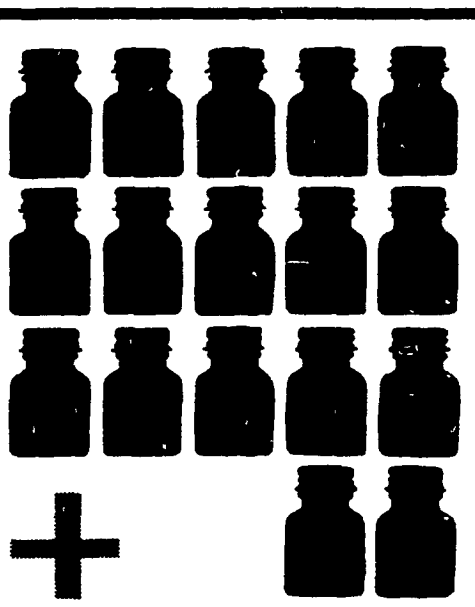
The storm spread abundant rainfall across the southeast and was followed by colder temperatures.

USSR. Rain again prevented winter grain harvesting in the northwest last week. The sugarbeet growing area had low temperatures which possibly damaged a small portion of the crop. Winter grain growth continued only in the North Caucasus and the southern Ukraine as colder weather set in.

South America. Abnormally heavy rain is expected to delay ripening of the wheat crop and interfere with harvest activities in Brazil as well as affect the quality of the grain.

Abundant-possibly excessive-moisture is available for spring sowing of maize and soybeans. Rain fell only in the northern wheat area and was more beneficial to spring-planted maize than to the nearly mature wheat.

Australia. In the northern portion of western Australia, most of New South Wales and Queensland - which combined produced about 60 percent of Australia's wheat crop - inadequate rain during the growth cycle has stressed the nearly mature grain.



Mol-Mix®
liquid supplements

Quality ingredients add up to a quality product.

Most of you dairymen know that supplementing your cattles' diet is a mandatory part of any dairy operation. And you probably know that liquid supplementation is the most efficient (and therefore, least expensive) way of doing it. But, what you may not have considered is this If you're not using a quality product, your efforts may be in vain.

Mol-Mix is made with the finest quality ingredients available, including those which are "performance-oriented" to give you the results you're looking for. Yet these special ingredients, things like phosphoric acid, ammonium polyphosphate, corn distiller's solubles, and condensed fermented corn extractives, are the very ones that many other supplements lack!

You might not realize just what these extra ingredients can do. Drop by your Mol-Mix dealer and let him show you what each adds to the quality of Mol-Mix.

But one thing won't need explaining: the dollar-and-cents advantage of Mol-Mix. Our quality ingredients mean more net profit for you; some dairymen report as much as four and a half dollars return for every dollar invested in Mol-Mix.

Mol-Mix liquid supplements it all adds up to a lot more quality

Wheat prices rise despite record supply

LANCASTER — The 1980 U.S wheat crop developed through a variety of conditions - from drought to excessive rains - but reached a record 2.36 billion bushels, 10 percent larger than last year.

On the strength of this crop, total 1980-81 marketing year supplies rose to 3.3 billion bushels, also the largest ever.

But the price dampering effects of the larger wheat supply have been more than offset. While wheat prices began the season below year-ago levels, prospects for record disappearance - particularly strong exports - coupled with cautious farmer marketing and reduced feed grain and oilseed supplies, have boosted prices well above last year. Wheat in the farmer-owned reserve was released in late October when farm prices reached $4.20 a bushel.

For the season, the average farm price is expected to range from $3.95 to $4.25, compared with 1979/80's $3.82

Expectations of another banner U.S. export year were heightened further when China's import requirements were revised upward and it became apparent that Southern Hemisphere countries would have reduced exportable supplies. Thus, total U.S. exports in 1980-81 are expected to top 1.5 billion bushels for the first time. The U.S. share of international wheat trade in 1980-81 is projected at 45 percent, compared with 44 percent in 1979-80.

Global wheat production in 1980-81 is forecast at around 440 million tons, five percent above the low outturn in 1979-80. Except for India and China, all major Northern Hemisphere producers harvested larger crops.

Dry conditions have reduced crop prospects significantly in the Southern Hemisphere. Total utilization at 447 million tons implies a further drawdown of world wheat stocks in 1980-81 of about seven million tons.

Thus year-end stocks, estimated at 72 million tons, would represent 16 percent of the world's yearly utilization, the lowest level since before 1960.

U.S. domestic use may rise slightly because of an expected expansion in wheat feeding and continuing growth in food use. Since total 1980-81 disappearance will absorb most of the record crop, end-of-season stocks will remain close to last June's 903 million bushels.

The supplies of the various wheat classes vary considerably this year.

Record harvests of Hard Red, Soft Red, and White winter wheat mean alltime high supplies for each - up, seven, 36, and 25 percent respectively from last season.

In turn, adverse weather hit the spring crops, reducing production prospects and creating some quality problems.

This year's Hard Red Spring supply is down by 12 percent and Durum by 15 percent.

Wheat producers had no planting restrictions for their 1980 crop. Prices are holding relatively strong in spite of the record crop. With current prospects pointing toward higher price levels next season, and no set-aside requirements for the 1981 crop, producers are likely to expand their plantings - possibly to a record acreage.

FmHA begins loan program for fuel plants

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Farmers Home Administration has begun a new loan program to encourage the production of synthetic, non-petroleum fuel from biomass materials.

Farmers Home Administration will make loans directly and will guarantee loans by commercial banks and other private lenders for construction, expansion and conversion of plants producing fuel alcohol and other types of biomass energy, said Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland

Bergland said the program's main objective is to cut the nation's dependence on imported petroleum and natural gas. He said the program will assist mostly alcohol fuels, but methane gas and wood-energy projects are also eligible.

Biomass fuel plants financed by Farmers Home Administration, said Bergland, will help meet goals set by President Carter and the Energy Security Act — production of at least 500 million gallons of fuel alcohol or the equivalent by the end of 1981 and 920 million gallons by the end of 1982.

"The new program as presently funded should result in 260 million gallons of additional fuel alcohol production capacity," Bergland said, "and this will roughly equal the 264 million gallons of production capacity which will result from distillery construction already assisted with loan guarantees from USDA's existing programs."

Taken together, this 524 million gallons of distillery capacity for fuel alcohol will exceed the nation's goal of 500 million gallons by the end of 1981 and will represent about 56 percent of the production goal of 920 million gallons by the end of 1982, said Bergland

Farmers Home Administration will finance biomass fuel plants under Title II of the Energy Security Act of 1980, also called the "Biomass Energy and Alcohol Fuels Act of 1980."

The act became law this summer Farmers Home proposed regulations for its lending under the act, then held public hearings and invited written comments on regulations

Final regulations for the Farmers Home loans and loan guarantees were published in the Federal Register on October 30, and applications could be submitted beginning on that date.

The law and regulations provide that Farmers Home will make "insured" direct loans of $1 million or less per project for small-scale plants capable of producing less than one million gallons per year of alcohol fuel or the equivalent in other forms of biomass energy.

Farmers Home will guarantee loans by commercial banks and other private lenders for intermediate-scale plants capable of producing more than one million but less than 15 million gallons of alcohol fuel or the equivalent per year.

In most cases, projects capable of producing 15 million gallons or more per year will not be eligible for Farmers Home financing but may be eligible for financing by the U.S. Department of Energy

Exceptions are plants owned by cooperatives or using wood or wood wastes or residues as feedstocks, which may be eligible for financing by either Farmers Home or the Department of Energy. Plants using municipal or aquatic wastes as feedstocks will be eligible for financing by the Department of Energy only, regardless of size.

Farmers Home will give priority in its loans and loan guarantees to projects using non-petroleum fuel for primary heat in the production process.

The USDA credit agency will make and guarantee loans only for construction of new plants or conversion or expansion of existing plants — not for operating expenses.

Farmers Home will make or guarantee loans for up to 30 years or the useful life of a project — whichever is less. Insured loans will be made at interest rates set by a formula which reflects the cost of money to the government. Guaranteed loans will be made at interest rates agreed upon by borrowers and lenders.

Details may be obtained at local offices of the Farmers Home Administration.

Delaware ag student wins AZ scholarship

BEL AIRE, Md. — Michael Liberati, a student in the University of Delaware's College of Agricultural Sciences, has received a National Alpha Zeta Foundation Scholarship for the 1980-1981 academic year.

Michael Liberati

Nominated by his home chapter, Liberati was one of 30 students across the country to receive such awards this year from the honorary agricultural fraternity.

An active member of the Delaware chapter, last year he won the local group's George Worrilow award, which is given annually to the junior with the most involvement in AZ.

A senior with a double major in agricultural engineering and plant science, he is a candidate for a degree with distinction. For his thesis he is doing research in the college's water quality laboratory on cadmium, one of the heavy metals present in sewage sludge.

This work is part of a federally funded regional project aimed at finding a way to bind heavy metals in sludge to the soil so that they are unavailable for plant uptake.

Liberati, a native of Bel Aire, Md., hopes to study environmental science and engineering in graduate school and then get a job dealing with environmental water quality control.

National Grange Master wants government out

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa — "While we recognize a need to have government involved in production agriculture, that involvement should be held to a minimum," said Ed Andersen, Master of the National Grange, during an address here Monday on the opening day of the 114th annual session of the National Grange.

Andersen said the Grange would support a new farm program similar to the one which will expire in 1981. He said a reserve program should continue to be the cornerstone of any new farm act. "We have seen during the past year just how valuable and necessary a reserve program is," said the national farm leader.

Andersen was addressing the Grange delegate body for the first time since his election last November. He said the resolutions before them to deliberate during the week would have a profound effect on the future of agriculture and rural America during the 1980's He expressed particular concern about soil and water conservation practices.

He cited as problems the increased demand for American agricultural products around the world, an increase in the erosion of top soil and the loss of prime farm land to non-farm use He said new equipment is now available to help farmers with major new tillage practice.

He suggested tax funds be made available on a participating basis to encourage farmers to use the best conservation programs and practices on their farms.

Prior to his election as National Master, Andersen was a dairy farmer in Waterloo, Nebraska. He said present dairy surplusses due to increased production in 1979 and 1980 could effect the dairy price support program. He recommends that dairy farmers reduce their production in 1981 to prevent any drastic changes in the dairy program.

He said the dairy industry and consumer cannot afford to lose the dairy program which assures an adequate and steady supply of fresh milk.

In the field of transportation, Andersen feels the de-regulation of the rail and trucking industries will increase competition and give agricultural shippers better service and greater protection from rate increases. He expressed concern about Congressional action this year that reduced revenue for the Highway Trust Fund. He opposes the exemption of the federal excise tax on gasohol and the plan to supplement the Highway Trust Fund from general revenues.

He said the Fund pays for highway construction and maintenance and the money should continue to come directly from those who are the users.

Andersen also spoke out in opposition to the American Agricultural Investment Management Company and similar groups which are taking pension funds and purchasing farm land because of tax advantages. He said this practice will cause the price of farm land to escalate and be unfair to bona fide farmers He recommends a change in the tax laws so pension funds invested in farm land would be liablel for the same taxes as are the assets of the family farm owner.

In an interview prior to his Master's address, Andersen said his personal view of the economic future of American agriculture rests with the willingness of American farmers to organize themselves into marketing groups

He said he feels the weakest point in the family farm structure is the marketing system. Andersen said dairy farmers do well because 90 percent market their product through cooperatives. He also said farmers number one problem today is inflation.

He said production costs continue to rise well beyond what the farmer realizes from his crop and until inflation is brought under control both the farmer and consumer will continue to be hurt.

Watkins elected director of Red Angus group

MT. AIRY, Md. — Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Watkins, Jr., R4, Mt. Airy; and Mr. and Mrs. Albert McPherson also of Mt. Airy, recently attended the 27th Annual Red Angus Association Convention in Dallas, Texas.

Watkins was elected Director-At-Large of the Red Angus Association of America at this Dallas meeting.

As a part of this new position, Watkins will be representing the Red Angus breed, one of the 15 affiliated beef cattle breed associations, at the National Cattlemen's Association Purebred Advisory Council Symposium in Denver, Colorado, December 1 and 2.

This Symposium provides an opportunity for cattlemen to become better acquainted, to exchange ideas, and to better understand the cattlemen's place in the Nation's beef cattle industry

Mr. and Mrs. Watkins were instrumental in forming a new local Red Angus Association called the Mason-Dixon Red Angus Association. This group is for Red Angus Breeders from the Northeast States.

Parasites cost hogmen $1 per pig

HARRINGTON, Del. — External parasites cost hog producers about $1 per animal marketed. The hog louse and mange mite are the major causes of these losses, says University of Delaware extension livestock manager, Richard Fowler. Controlling these pests is an important part of herd management.

The hog louse is visible as it hangs on hair and behind the ears of pigs. It doesn't burrow into the skin, but as it feeds on blood and lymph tissue it does cause irritation that makes the pig itch.

Restlessness and scratching lower feed intake and reduce feed efficiency. Young pigs severely affected by lice can actually become anemic, says Fowler. Lice are also capable of carrying swine pox virus.

The parasite can survive for up to three days off the pig if there's a warm place for it to live. The adult female lays about 100 eggs over a 25-day period. As eggs hatch, the immature lice feed on the soft tissue of the pig.

In contrast to the hog louse, the mange mite isn't visible to the naked eye. The most common mite found on swine, it burrows well into the top layer of skin.

An adult female mange mite lays 15 to 45 eggs during a 15-day period. These are deposited in tunnels in the skin and mature to adults in 10 to 15 days.

Mite infestations are usually first noticed in the inner ear. From there they spread over the head, neck and body. Mite activity increases with higher temperatures. Intense itching usually results, causing pigs to spend a lot of time scratching on fences, feeders and buildings.

Both mange mites and hog lice are found only on swine. Pig-to-pig contact is the chief means of spreading. To be successful, treatment must interrupt the life cycle of either pest. Treating the sow is the best way to prevent transmission to the baby pigs. Some of the chemicals used for control shouldn't be used on animals under weaning age, cautions the specialist.

Spray sows routinely with malathion six weeks before farrowing. An additional spray treatment four weeks before farrowing will provide satisfactory control.

Since the mange mite burrows into the skin, surface applications need to be made under pressure. Use 200 pounds of pressure when spraying to force the insecticide into tunnels. Apply two to four quarts of the spray and be sure to get good coverage around the head and neck. Eradication is very difficult. But routine spraying keeps pests under control.

Maintain control on growing finishing pigs by spraying. Treat animals eight weeks old with a spray and follow it up two weeks later with another treatment. Malathion dust provides some control if spraying isn't possible.

If you use bedding on your swine, treat it with an approved insecticide according to label directions. Some of the new pour-ons are safe to use on lactating sows

During cold weather, don't spray young pigs. Use dust and apply it to the bedding as well. If spraying is necessary during cold weather, choose a calm, sunny day when the temperature is above freezing, he says.

Read the label on all products and follow directions for safe, effective treatment. Observe withdrawal periods and application rates. Do not overtreat, he advises.

Broiler placements up

HARRISBURG — Placements of broiler chicks in the Commonwealth during the week ending October 25 were 2,148,000, according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service.

The placements were ten percent above the corresponding week a year earlier, but four percent below the previous week. Average placements during the past nine weeks were 13 percent above a year earlier.

Placements in the 21 key poultry producing states were 76,203,000, one percent below the previous week but weight percent above the same week a year ago. Average placements during the past nine weeks were three percent above a year earlier.

Broiler-fryers slaughtered in Pennsylvania under federal inspection during the week ending October 15 totaled 1,936,000, with an average liveweight of 4.10 pounds.

ANNOUNCING AN ORGANIC EDUCATIONAL MEETING
MONDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1980
1:30 - 3:30 P.M. and 7:30 - 9:00 P.M.

PLACE - BLUE BALL FIRE HALL, ON RT. 322, 1 BLOCK EAST OF RED LIGHT, BLUE BALL, PA., 12 MILES EAST OF LANCASTER

One teacher will be Ray Nielson, a well experienced researcher and past farmer now with National Ag Products Development Inc. at Grand Rapids, Mich. We are not definite yet on other teachers.

Aflotoxin and Mycotoxin in corn is harmful and disastrous to livestock and poultry. Authorities say it shouldn't be fed. It is getting worse every year. Some farmers are refused a market.

Come and learn the easy, natural way to prevent pestilence, disease and nematodes, etc.

Learn a simple inexpensive method of breaking hardpan better and cheaper than chiseling, to let the excess rainwater down and prevent erosion, and get rid of swamps. Water stored in broken subsoil will seep up again when needed. This year proved it.

Learn how to grow nearly enough protein for your livestock by just increasing the protein in your corn and hay.

Learn how to conserve moisture in soil so that crops don't mind an average drought.

Learn why livestock do better for organic farmers.

Learn how to have vegetables ripen earlier with more flavor and keeping qualities and stand a harder frost.

Learn which fertilizer, cationic or anionic, to use to make a big stalk and which to use to make much fruit or grain

Above is not just dreams. That is why there are at least 11 or more organic fertilizer dealers in Lancaster County. We can start you selling in your county. Crop results sell, no need for gift of gab It is pleasant work to help farmers survive.

ORGANIC VEGETABLES WANTED

Buyers will be at the meeting from the cities who want quantities of certified organic vegetables at 10% to 15% premium price, and huge quantity of partly organic Restaurants and stores are learning organic is better Talk with the buyers from 3 30 to 7 30 Tell other farmers who like to grow vegetables. Inter-State hears passionate plea for progress

LANCASTER — Some 1000 members and guests heard a passionate plea for a return to "progress" at the 63rd annual banquet of Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative at the Host Farm Tuesday night.

Featured speaker and author of a book, "The War Against Progress," was Herbert E. Meyer, associate editor of FORTUNE magazine.

On the outcome of this war against progress rests the future prosperity of the country, according to Meyer

He defined progress as letting people lead the lives they want to lead.

Meyer said the anti-progress philosophy of the past 10 years has promoted the concept that a country can only go so far and it's time to stop.

This philosophy, according to Meyer, has been spread by such people as liberals, bureaucrats, members of the media and movie stars – "very well educated and quite affluent people who have made it and want to pull the ladder up behind them"

He described them as being people who would say:

"I got my gucci loafers and when I go back-packing in the wilderness, I don't want to see anyone else out there."

Meyer said that these "prophets of gloom and doom" have made targets of such projects as the development of Alaska, offshore oil drilling and building of the SST.

"It's time to talk about and speak up for progress," Meyer said.

"We must make a decision whether it's a go or no-go situation. If we're for progress, then let's fly high and move ahead."

He said that progress can be recaptured by returning to a climate suitable for economic growth. The necessary ingredients for such a climate, according to Meyer, are low individual taxes, high corporate profits, an absolute minimum of governmental regulations and a forward push toward new scientific technologies

Dr James E Honan, Inter-State general manager, honored two retirees with gifts during the banquet.

Galen Furry, of Martinsburg, retired as fieldman and Lester C. Jones, dairyman from Medford, N J , as co-op president.

Toastmaster for the evening was Grover C Gouker Jr , of Dale Carnegie, Inc., and entertainment was provided by Life, a singing group.—DA

The Milk Check

TOM JURCHAK
County Agent

HAPPY NEW YEAR

Commodity Credit Corporation's purchase of over 60 million pounds of butter powder and cheese at the new support prices were enough to increase the average Minnesota-Wisconsin price by 35 cents $12.42 for 3.5 test milk in October. That was the biggest jump in the M-W since August 1978 and a good way to start the first month of the new marketing year.

Once again, you're still far away from the support price by just about the same distance as last April after the Spring price increase. Now you're aiming at the new support price of $12.80 instead of $12.07. And, it just keeps getting harder to catch up by increasing government purchases with each new increase in the support price.

The 35 cent boost to the M-W means a corresponding 35 cent increase over September in the Class II price to $12.48 in Order 2 for October milk. That's on top of a 12 cent increase in the Class I price to $14.11 (also for October).

The October M-W price will be reflected in your Class I price in December when it goes to $14.67, a nice Christmas present from your 35 cent happy new year.

NOT TOO SHABBY

You may feel like complaining about CCC purchases that don't get prices up to the support level quicker but the increases they've given you haven't been too shabby.

From May to October this year CCC purchases have given you an increase of 76 cents in the Minnesota-Wisconsin price. That may not sound like much to you but during the same period in 1979, when CCC purchases were not your sole means of support, the M-W increased only 58 cents.

You're doing better with the government than when you were on your own.

While we're on the subject, I should mention that CCC purchases from April to September did move butter, powder and cheese prices up to the support level.

The support prices after April were $1.40 for butter; 89 cents for powder; and $1.32 for cheese. In September the average market prices were $1 45 for butter; 89 cents for powder; and $1.37 for cheese.

So, the CCC did their job within the program as it was laid out. The problem was the supply of milk was so heavy it was impossible to get the manufacturing grade milk price up to the support level even though the support prices on the products had been exceeded.

In addition, there has been no adjustment in the make allowance during the past year and this has contributed to the price differences. The make allowance, or the margin, is the estimated average cost of processing the milk into butter, powder or cheese. These costs have gone up for the processors just as your costs have gone up. But no increase has been provided in the price support program — it has to come out of the price paid for the milk.

This is an area that needs examination when a new price support program is supported by Congress next year.

Johnstone honored

LANCASTER — William F. Johnstone, Penn State Extension economist, received the Agricultural Communicator Award of the Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative on Wednesday.

Johnstone received the award during the Young Cooperator Breakfast Program at the Inter-State annual meeting at the Host Farm.

A member of the Penn State Extension staff since 1948, Johnstone was honored for his more than three decades of service to the dairy industry. Johnstone specializes in milk marketing.

It was also announced at the annual meeting that five fieldmen have been added to the co-op's staff of dairy sanitarians.

They include William H. Kilmer, who will work in Berks and Bucks counties and part of New Jersey; Lester L. Lau, Seven Valley, in Adams and York counties; Sterling H. White and Chester Gelwicks, working west of the Susquehanna River; and Andrew Potocek, in the western, central and northern sections of Lancaster County.

William Johnstone

These additions bring the dairy sanitarian field staff to 23.

LMA president says livestock industry's flexibility is key

CHAMBERLAIN, S.D. — The livestock industry's flexibility will be its most important trait in the years ahead said the president of Livestock Marketing Association.

Speaking before a meeting of the South Dakota Beef Industry Council, Gail Sohler said this flexibility was never more evident than in the industry reaction following the defeat of the "Beeferendum" program.

Since the defeat, several new ideas are being discussed within the industry about how to build and develop better markets for beef, he noted.

These suggested "new programs and directions prove something very important about our industry - we can rebound from what many feel was the setback of the Beeferendum defeat — that we can dust ourselves off, take a new look at our options, and get moving again."

The new programs include several recent proposals by officials of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, the National Cattlemen's Association, and others centering on the beefing up of the industry's national/state cooperative beef market development efforts.

Sohler told the group about LMA's work to develop and expand the North American livestock and meat economy, through the establishment of its Continental Livestock Commission.

"LMA formed the Commission," he said, "because we strongly feel that the North American economy offers the U.S. livestock industry as much opportunity for growth as overseas trade."

The industry's marketing sector, he said, not only must respond to changing marketing requirements, it must lead the way. Video marketing and other types of electronic marketing are examples.

"The long-term future of these and other marketing techniques is yet to be decided, but individual marketing businesses across the country are applying their experience, effort and investment to evaluate their potential."

LMA places a high premium on flexibility he said, as evidenced by the types of marketing businesses it represents.

"Today our 1600 subscribers in the United States and Canada include livestock markets, dealers, brokers, order buyers, commission firms, stockyard companies - virtually every kind of livestock marketing business, using every kind of marketing technique, and supplying every type of marketing service."

Sohler warned that maintaining the industry's flexibility is not easy.

'Outside forces, such as government regulation, can limit it So can our own attitudes and the ways in which we manage our own businesses."

But, he said, "We have a great diverse industry. Our challenge is to be sure that we maintain the attitude necessary to make tomorrow better than today."

EXTRUDED PROTEIN SOURCES

Dealer inquiries invited

Since the development of the InstaPro Extruder by Triple "F" for processing Full Energy Soybeans, Heat Treated Protein (HTP) we have seen dramatic changes in dairy economics where these protein sources have been used.

Full Energy Soybeans are heat processed to remove toxic, growth-inhibiting substances present in raw soybeans, and the oil cells are ruptured to make the vegetable oil more available to livestock.

HTP: It has now been found that simply by increasing the temperature when heating protein for ruminants, the protein is made less soluble. This reduction is solubility results in more amino acids being passed through the rumen to the lower digestive tract where the efficiency is greatly improved over conventional protein sources.

Wolff is new Conservation Assn. president

POCONO MANOR — Lebanon County's George Wolff was recently elected president of the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation District Directors, Inc. during the 33rd Joint Annual Conference of District Directors and the State Conservation Commission.

In previous years, Wolff has served as the Associations' second vice-president and first vice-president. He is also active as a public affairs consultant in Harrisburg.

Wolff replaces last year's president Robert Jones, a Northampton County alfalfa farmer.

Wolff's home county placed second in the annual Goodyear Contest, sponsored by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company. The Lebanon Conservation District was recognized as a District that has developed a broad and effective conservation program. Winners of the Goodyear Award were the members of the Northumberland Conservation District.

The Lancaster County Conservation District was recognized as the third place District in the state for director with 89.3% attendance. Tieing for first place with a 94% score were Centre and Bradford Conservation Districts.

A Cambria County farmer, Jerome Carl, was selected as the Conservation Farmer of the Year.

Carl owns and operates a 400-acre grain and livestock farm and farms an additional 400 acres of rented land in the Dysart section of Cambria County.

When he became a cooperator of the District in 1966, he agreed to protect some of the best farming soils found in the county Since that time extensive conservation practices have been installed or initiated.

In addition to his conservation responsibilities, Carl is a community leader in many areas — church, civic, sportsmen, and virtually all county agricultural organizations. He is active in promoting legislative matters dealing with the farming community and promoting resource conservation.

Carl, through his 800-acre farm operation, has set a fine example of how working through a Conservation District can increase the yield per acre, promote the conservation of soil and water, and improve the quality of farming.

A York County teacher was recognized as the Conservation Educator of the Year.

Hampton is an Environmental Science teacher in the South Western School District. He has developed and organized the following units for his seventh grade classes — hunter education; wetlands ecology; wildlife management techniques; and winter wildlife activities. His approach to Environmental Education is to have a program that will generate ecological awareness in each student — kindergarten through twelfth grade.

From the time the student comes through the classroom door he said he wants them to feel that he or she is some place different and special. He added he wants his classroom to be filled from terrariums and aquariums to skin and bones, to set the mood, to motivate the students to explore.

From this beginning the environmental program at South Western has grown.

CONSERVATION ORGANIZATION OF THE YEAR

Although Kiwanis Scout Troop 99, Elk County, is located in St. Marys, many of their varied activities are spread throughout the county One of their major on-going projects is with the St. Marys Sportsmens Club where they have planted trees, cut browse, and one stream improvement work for erosion control and to prevent road damage.

The District Waterways patrolman has commanded the troop for the outstanding work that they have performed throughout the county and the professional manner it was carried out

The state primary purpose of the group is "to train young men for the future in many areas of endeavor" and could also include a motivation and commitment to live in harmony with their surroundings.

CONSERVATIONIST OF THE YEAR

Robert Moorhouse, Lawrence County, a retired construction inspector, is county delegate and president of the Lawrence County Council of Conservation Clubs. He has been involved in the conservation movement for most of his life, and has made a significant contribution in education of both youth and adults, and promotion of conservation throughout the county and state

His service to youth includes 27 years as Scoutmaster and Merit Badge Counselor; chairman of the Penn State Junior Conservation Camp, and in 1962 he started a local conservation camp, which is still active. He has been a member of the National Outdoor Writers Association for 16 years and Pennsylvania editor for the Outdoor Journal Magazine for 17 years.

In addition, Moorhouse is active in radio and T.V. Broadcasting dealing with conservation of resource matters, and is involved with numerous other county activities and clubs.

MAURICE K. GODDARD FORESTRY AWARD

The Perkins Tree Farm has been for many years an excellent example of what the private woodlot owner can do through good planting and management. Mr. Perkins formulated and implemented his own management program, requiring relatively little professional assistance. Through his fine example, many others were motivated to put good management to use in their woodlots.

Mrs. Elizabeth Perkins has carried on the work started by her husband. She has remained a member of the American Tree Farm System and has been active in the local chapter of The Pennsylvania Forestry Association.

The management of the woodlot included consultation with the Pennsylvania Game Commission to maximize the wildlife benefits. Erosion and sediment control has always been an important part of Elizabeth Perkins' woodland management.

For thinning and harvesting operations, roads were laid out on grades six percent to eight percent on the average. Water bars were installed to reduce erosion. Filter strips were used to reduce the risk to streams. Stream crossings, for the most part, were non-existent. Harvesting operations were not conducted during rainy periods, further reducing the risk of erosion.

WATERSHED WOMAN OF THE YEAR

Elizabeth J. Johnson and Ruth S. Weir have provided a unified voice urging municipal, county, regional, state and national officials to understand the "Watershed Approach" in solving resource problems.

They have urged these officials to get better information on soils, hydrology and geology before decisions are made on land use and to consider the costs on all government levels and private citizens when decisions are made without such information.

They have advocated the adoption of stronger ordinances and enforcement methods and designed symposiums to stimulate innovative tools and techniques for land conservation in western Pennsylvania. Co-founders of the Squaw Run Area Watershed Association, both ladies are active in a host of environmental and related groups in the Pittsburgh area

Johnson is a graduate of Harvard University and Weir graduated from West Chester State Teachers College.

Retiring president Robert Jones presents Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Carl Cambria Co., with the Conservation Farmer of the Year award.

WATERSHED OF THE YEAR

The Loyalhanna Watershed covers 192,000 acres and is part of the Kiskiminetas River drainage in the lower Allegheny River basin.

The Association, under the leadership of executive director Lysle Sherwin, was recognized for their most effective job of planning and development of natural resources The Watershed developed effective working relationships with various agencies such as the Conservation District, the county Soil Conservation Service, various divisions of the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources, and others in a coalition of public and private agencies working to protect the Watershed's environmental, economic and social well-being.

ANNUAL REPORT CONTEST

ALLIS CHALMERS EDUCATOR AWARD

Louise Roslund's outstanding environmental education program at McKeesport School District, Allegheny County, developed by her, is for gifted students. A variety of projects and study areas are incorporated into the program.

The study areas of science, math, social studies, language arts, art and design are interrelated and expressed by the students through activities such as environmental symposia, problem solving for academic games, science fairs, peer teaching, writing contest, citizenship contests, Presidential Awards, and other activities as they arise The environmental education program is extended to other areas of the school program, to other schools in the area, and to other states in the nation by peer teaching sessions, environmental symposia, student exchange program, environmental survey; academic games-problem solving.

ALLIS CHALMERS CONSERVATION DISTRICT AWARD

The Allegheny County Conservation District's Environmental Education Program consists of several integral parts.

"Wee Willie Worm" Program was developed in 1978 to aid in spreading the conservation message to the youth. It consists of a costume, slides, flip chart, workbook and T-shirt. During 1979, approximately 3000 children heard the program.

Also, an annual Clean-Up Campaign and Poster Contest is held. Scholarships are provided to teachers

The District's newsletter, the "Forecast" contains a special column, the "Environmental Education Enformer". This column is used to inform educators of various seminars and workshops of interest being held, different materials available, it also contains suggested environmental projects, and an exchange for school proejcts and ideas. "Wee Willie Worm" also writes a column for the newsletter for the youth

Fall is time to begin alfalfa weed control

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — With the ground still firm from summer drought, this should be an ideal fall to help insure weed-free alfalfa stands in 1981. So says Ronald L. Ritter, extension weed control specialist and assistant professor of agronomy at the University of Maryland.

Ritter suggets that alfalfa growers get to this task just as soon as silo-filling is finished, corn harvest completed, and the last cutting of hay taken off.

First, inspect your hayfields to determine where the weed problems are. Then sketch a map to help you remember the problem areas.

Keep in mind that certain weeds thrive during the winter months when the close-cropped alfalfa plants are dormant and unable to shade them out. These pests include winter annuals like chickweed, henbit and mustard, as well as winter-growing perennial weeds like dandelions and dock.

If winter annuals are your problem and your alfalfa stand was established last spring or earlier, Ritter recommends a broadcast spray of Princep at the rate of one pound of active ingredient per acre.

This application may be made any time after the last cutting of alfalfa and before the ground freezes in mid-December. Read the label to determine actual amount of spray material needed to meet Ritter's recommendation.

For established stands - one-year-old or older - three other herbicides are available. They are metribuzin (Sencor or Lexone), Sinbar and Paraquat. These materials should be applied during alfalfa dormancy, from mid-December to early March.

At low rates, metribuzin and Sinbar control winter annual weeds, and at high rates they will control some of the ,winter perennials. They also provide residual control of germinating weeds through early spring

Paraquat is effective only against winter annuals, and it does not have a residual effect. Thus, it probably should not be applied until late winter.

In addition, Ritter reports he has observed an unusually large number of alfalfa fields across the state this fall which are infested with grassy weeds like orchardgrass and quackgrass. He says this is so because grassy weeds endure drought conditions better than does alfalfa.

For those fields with grassy weed problems, Ritter recommends a late-winter application of Kerb. This chemical will also control winter annuals and perennials about as well as metribuzin.

At the fairly high rate recommended, this chemical will also control some of the broadleaf winter perennial weeds. At low rates, it will control only the winter annuals

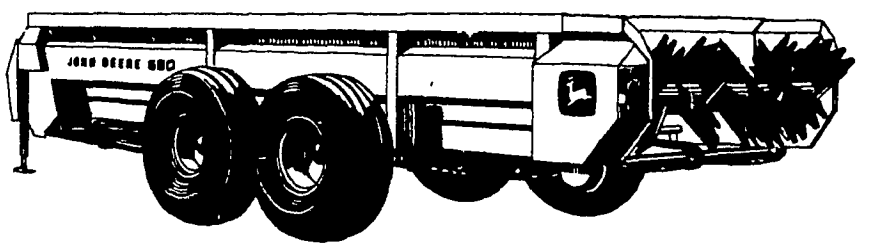
A beefy response to your long-term needs

The 4440 is indeed a powerful performer. But just as important, it has the strength to back up that power in the field. From stem to stern, it's beefier than its predecessor. There's a bigger-displacement engine, new engine cooling system, bigger transmission/hydraulic oil cooling system, 4-pinion differential, wider final drives, and bigger drive axles. These are just a few of the points we'd like to cover when you stop by the store and ask for more information on the 4440.

400-bushel capacity



This John Deere 680 Spreader's 400-bushel capacity makes it the biggest spreader we have ever engineered. And most likely one of the largest you'll find anywhere. You'll like the hydraulic shift control and lifetime-warranted all-steel sides. You'll also appreciate the fully hinged shielding and tandem walking-beam wheels, too. Ag exports set record for fiscal 1980

WASHINGTON, D.C. — United States agricultural exports reached a record high of $40.5 billion during fiscal year 1980, according to Thomas R. Hughes, administrator of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Foreign Agricultural Service.

Hughes said the export total for the fiscal year which ended Sept. 30 was up $8.5 billion, or 27 percent, from fiscal year 1979 and record high for the eleventh straight year.

At the same time, he noted substantial gains in the export volume for such key items as wheat, feed grains, the soybean complex, and cotton.

The figures, released last week, show export values increased for all commodity categories. Leading values gainers were cotton, valued at $3 billion, a gain of 59 percent, and grain and feeds, valued at $18.7 billion, 37 percent more than last year.

The volume of wheat and wheat flour exports rose 4.7 million tons to 36.9 million and feed grain exports rose by 11.7 tons to 71.2 million. Soybeans and product shipments increased by 5.0 million tons to 32.2 million.

Double crop corn and barley?

MIDDLETOWN, Del. — Double-cropped corn?

It's been tried before in Delaware without much success, but now the idea looks more promising. This year Middletown farmer Bill Haas got 163 bushels to the acre growing corn after barley under irrigation.

This high yield was the direct result of an excellent management package, says University of Delaware extension agronomist Dr. William Mitchell.

The corn was planted June 12 immediately after barley was harvested, using a short season hybrid (DeKalb XL 25A) that matures in 90 to 100 days.

Haas sprayed the barley stubble with Paraquat at the rate of one point per acre and Lasso and Atrazine 1.5 quarts each per acre.

He used 30 gallons of 30 percent nitrogen solution as a carrier (10 pounds nitrogen) for the Atrazine and Lasso, plus one pint per 100 gallons of X77 wetting agent.

His plant population was 25,500. At planting he applied 10 pounds of 10 percent granular Furadan per acre.

Haas irrigated immediately to get the corn out of the ground. He began watering regularly when plants were waist high. The corn received nine separate one-inch applications of water.

Twenty pounds of nitrogen were injected through the sprinkler system with each application. Over the season the corn got a total of 315 pounds of nitrogen. The crop was harvested October 22 at 23 percent moisture.

A lot of Haas' fellow farmers around the state may be skeptical of his achievement with double-cropped corn, because they've already tried to grow this crop after small grain and failed.

This was probably because they didn't irrigate or failed to achieve effective insect control, says Mitchell. By the time they'd shared their crop with the corn ear worms and other bugs, some of them were lucky to have any left for themselves. And without water the whole idea probably won't work in this area anyway, he says.

When you're talking about double-cropping corn, you're talking about trying to grow a crop planted almost 2 months later than usual. By the time it gets in the ground, the days are getting shorter and light intensity is diminishing so you can't waste any time. You've got to get plants started fast and keep them growing rapidly.

This is exactly what Haas did. Both his starter fertilizer and irrigation at seeding were critical in getting the crop going. Furadan was also very important in reducing injury from second and third generation corn borers. And water was essential to keep the crop growing and to keep it cool enough for good pollination.

It's also very important to use a short season hybrid. In fact, says Mitchell, this is when it should be used, not in early April - unless you're shooting for the early grain market - because in most years you'll take a loss in yield by using the short season hybrids then.

The agronomist thinks the idea of double cropping corn after small grains could have considerable significance on Delmarva in meeting the corn needs of the state's broiler industry.

"We've lost close to 75,000 acres of corn to soybeans in Delaware over the last few years," he says. "We need a good balance between the two crops in order to meet the demands of the broiler industry on the Shore for both grains."

If farmers can double-crop corn the way they do soybeans, maybe more will switch back to corn.

Mitchell urges farmers who have irrigation to take a close look at the idea, at any rate.

"Corn ear worm and other insects can be very bad late in the season, so this is something you need to be prepared to deal with," he warns. Application of insecticides in the planter, and in some cases later aerial sprays, may be needed. Otherwise you could be in trouble.

Whether or not it's possible to grow corn after wheat as well as barley is another question. Wheat normally matures a few weeks later than barley, so it's cutting the season rather close. But Haas may try to do just that next year, reports extension agent Dean Belt.

"He has the equipment and management abilities to do it, if anyone can," says Belt.

Haas may try to harvest his wheat a week early, using his grain drier to bring it down to the proper moisture level. This would let him plant the corn a bit sooner. If necessary, he may also harvest the corn on the early side and dry it down, too. But the big question is having enough moisture during July, August and early September to make the crop. That's where the irrigation comes in.

If the spring growing season or other conditions delay the wheate harvest for any reason, Haas still has the option to grow soybeans. That's what most farmers do after small grains anyway. The beauty of the idea of double-cropped corn is that it adds another alternative to your cropping program.

Lebanon DHIA members hold annual meeting

BY CURT HARLER

SCHAEFFERSTOWN — The Secretary of the Lebanon County Dairy Herd Improvement Association, Kenneth I. Sellers wrote his own name in the County's record books this year.

Sellers, R4 Lebanon, took home the trophy for highest increase in herd production and the first place butterfat award at the group's annual meeting held at Schaefferstown Tuesday night.

His 42 Holsteins led the County DHIA roll with a record of 760 pounds butterfat and 19,364 pounds milk.

The high herd for milk production this year is the Bollingers' Willow Maple Farm, R1 Newmanstown. Their 44 Holsteins pumped out 20,534 pounds milk, with a butterfat output of 697 pounds.

Outstanding individual cow in the County is owned by Eugene Houser, R2 Lebanon. She made a record of 34,628 pounds milk and 1324 pounds butterfat.

Six directors were elected under the County's new staggered term system which includes all six supervisor's routes.

Eugene Houser, left, had the outstanding cow in the County DHIA. She produced 34,628 pounds milk and 1324 pounds fat. Award was presented by Director Edwin Funk.

Donald Bollinger, Willow Maple Farm, is congratulated by Lebanon DHIA Director Edwin Funk, right, for having the high herd milk average. Cows turned out 20,534 pounds milk this year. It's the sixth straight year Willow Maple Farm has topped the Lebanon DHIA for milk.

Ken Sellers, right, was honored twice by the Lebanon DHIA Tuesday night. His herd topped the County fat average at 760 pounds and also showed the most improvement over last year's average. His 42 Holsteins made 19,364 pounds milk. Trophies were presented by Director Edwin Funk.

One director per association is elected for a two year term in even numbered years. Three directors-at-large will be elected on the odd numbered years.

Voted into office were: Galen Bolinger, R1 Newmanstown; Harvey T. Bomgardner, R3 Annville; Mike Arnold, Arnold Acres, R2 Lebanon; Hershey Bare, R2 Lebanon; Marlin Bennetch, R2 Myerstown, and Ken Mase, R4 Lebanon.

County Extension Director Newton Bair spoke of the growth of the DHIA in the past couple of years. Lebanon county recently has grown from four to six supervisors. At present there are 152 herds on test, 121 of them making over 400 pounds fat.

There still is room for some more herds to join the DHIA, he said.

Lebanon dairymen are doing well compared to the state average While value of roughage and grain fed Lebanon herds, at $774 per animal, is $67 per cow higher than the state average, the difference shows up in the bottom line.

November time to mulch strawberries

MEDIA — Early to late November is the time to mulch strawberry beds in Pennsylvania. The exact date depends on local conditions in your area of the state

According to James J. McKeehen, Delaware County extension agricultural agent a rule of thumb is to apply mulch when the plants have experience one or two heavy frosts A heavy frost will cause the strawberry leaves to turn dark reddish green. Mulching is essential where plants are grown thru black polythylene mulch.

A light covering of mulch protects the plants from severe winter temperatures and prevents "heaving" of the shallow rooted strawberry from alternate freezing and thawing by tending to keep the soil at an even temperature. If the plants are heaved out of the ground they will dry out and die.

However, even slight heaving causes root damage which may allow disease organisms to enter. If the grower delays removal of the mulch in the spring, then the plants will remain dormant later in the spring. This may delay blossoming often past the critical frost period. If mulch is to be removed early, to encourage early maturity, the grower should be prepared to control spring frosts with sprinkler irrigation.

Remember that spring frosts result in severe losses to the best portion of the developing crop.

Settled mulch three to four inches thick makes good protection. This will require three to four tons per acre depending on whether or not the whole bed is mulched or only the rows If the whole bed is mulched, next spring's weeds will be reduced - unless, of course, the mulching material contained many weeds and seeds.

Marsh hay is relatively weed-free. Straw from specially grown, immature grain fields or carefully harvested fields is relatively weed-free as well as fresh straw which has been subjected to prolonged weathering. Proper application of a herbicide in fall or early spring can control volunteer weeds.

Materials usually used for mulching are marsh hay, wheat, rye, barley, or oat straw. Chopped cornstalks, ground cobs, sawdust, bark chips, peat moss, pine needles, broom sedge, and sudan grass will be used if care is taken not to smother the crowns Leaves are less suitable since they tend to pack and may smother the plants

Hunting restricted in big game season

COUDERSPORT — Pennsylvania's hunters are reminded by the Game Commission that seasons for nearly all wild birds and wild animals will be closed during the regular firearms deer seasons, and any possible extension of the seasons.

The restriction will also apply during the bear season in the 29 counties where bear hunting will be permitted on November 24. The bear season this year will be open in the counties of Bradford, Cameron, Carbon, Centre, Clarion, Clearfield, Clinton, Columbia, Elk, Forest, Huntingdon, Jefferson, Lackawanna, Luzerne, Lycoming, McKean, Mifflin, Monroe, Pike, Potter, Snyder, Sullivan, Susquehanna, Tioga, Union, Venango, Warren, Wayne and Wyoming.

In the 38 counties which will be closed to bear hunting, regular small game and furbearer hunting is permissible on November 24.

During the regular firearms deer and bear seasons (in areas where deer and bear hunting are permitted), the only species that may be lawfully hunted are deer and bear and migratory game birds which are still "in season."

Racoons may be hunted statewide between sunset and one-half hour before sunrise during the firearms deer and bear seasons.

The ban on hunting most species in big game seasons started in 1974. It is designed to prevent shooters from hunting for or killing a second deer or bear after having taken their first whitetail or bruin. Previously, such shooters generally claimed they were hunting for foxes, chimpmunks, etc The ban on hunting most species now precludes giving this reason as an excuse

Lebanon County dairymen had a return above feed costs of $1215 per animal, or nearly $50 per cow better than the state average. Most economists regard the return above feed costs as the best indication of a dairy's profitability.

Bair did offer one word of caution to dairymen. He noted there is an excess of milk in the market and warned dairymen against any big expansion in cow numbers

He encouraged efficiency in production as the way to make more profit without increasing workload or overburdening the already glutted market

State Director Harold Bollinger, during his presentation, told farmers the top herd in Pennsylvania is a 16 cow herd owned by Tom Williams, Bradford.

Williams' 16 Holsteins pumped out an average of 25,000 pounds milk and 975 pounds butterfat.

Bollinger also told members there will be a new one story 40 by 80 foot DHIA testing building erected at Penn State at a cost of $293,000. That cost will be paid by dairymen.

He said the cost works out to one cent per cow per month for 15 years.

He also said the DHIA testing fees will be raised to 31 cents per cow per month for all animals on all programs. The increase, the first since 1977, goes into effect on January 1, 1981.

Introduced to County dairymen was Michael O'Conner, Penn State dairy specialist in charge of reproductive problems in cattle.

He told dairymen progestrone testing is not a certain pregnancy test. It is only 85 percent effective in saying which cows are pregnant. But it is 95 percent effective in diagnosing those which are not pregnant, he said.

Penn State does not do the test, but Cornell will do tests for Pennsylvania farmers interested in the program. It takes five to seven days to get test results returned to the farm.

About 250 people attended the meeting which was held at the Schaefferstown Fire Hall.

State Grange sets policy for 1981

LEWISTOWN — Many items of legislative, dairy, and general agricultural interest were approved by State Grangers at their annual meeting.

At the Lewistown sessions Grangers acted on the largest number of resolutions in recent memory.

In determining the percent of parity used for support price determination the State Grange requested that imported dairy products be excluded from the computations.

On the subject of a milk promotion referendum, Grangers said the rate of assessment must be not less than one-half percent or more than one percent of the weighted average blend prices by all orders involved.

The administrative and operating budgets must not exceed five percent of the funds collected, and the advisory board must not include more than 25 producer members, limited to two full, consecutive, three-year-terms, Grangers said.

Casein imports must be rigidly controlled by the ITC, they said.

The following resolution was accompanied by a blast at the increasing brucellosis incidence of Brucellosis in this state.

Any cattle dealer being convicted of ear tag or health chart manipulation, must lost his license permanently, they said.

A minimum fine of $10,000 for each offense should be imposed, upon conviction.

Further, all brucellosis-infected, or reactor cattle being sold at a livestock auction, for beef or beef purposes, should be freeze-branded with the letter "B"

An endorsement should be required of each herd or handler the animals was with while the health chart was valid

A minimum of $2500 fine should be levied against any licensed cattle dealer implicated with a suspended dealer.

A mailed-out release should be sent to all certified veterinarians in the state or specified area, depending on the outbreak or intensity of the disease, they said.

The Grange also endorsed 80 percent of parity of support prices, and that it be readjusted in April and October to reflect changes in the cost of production.

On anti-biotic tolerances, the Grange recommends it be established to allow 0.03 ppm of antibiotic residue in milk, meat, and other foodstuffs.

Since dairy farmers in Northeastern Pennsylvania who ship milk to Federal Order 2 are losing five cents per hundredweight by not being regulated, and since milk dealers in Northeastern Pennsylvania only pay a small percentage for the milk produced the first 15 days of the preceding month, the Grange is calling for the U.S. Agriculture Secretary to call for a hearing in Federal Order 2 to have it extended into Northeast and North Central Pennsylvania.

Further, they are calling for milk dealers in Pennsylvania to pay 80 percent or more if the first fifteen days of the preceeding month in a milk check on the first to the fifth of the month, and the balance of the milk check on the 20th of the month.

Contained within the policy statement of the legislative committee, is a recommendation opposing any tariff legislation or Public Utilities Commission regulations allowing utilities to establish insulatin standards. The reasoning behind this is because they establish these standards before they connect power.

"While proper for homes with electric heat, it is not proper for all homes," they said

Another resolution adopted in the policy statement opposes setting up another land grant institution within Pennsylvania. There was legislation introduced this year attempting to name Lincoln University a land grant college.

It was felt that since the state already appropriates more money that any other state does to its higher learning institutions, but ranks near the bottom in per capita support, this action would be inappropriate.

Another area is the Harness Racing Fund. Since the formation of the Fund, the total amount of available money has never been increased beyond $400,000. One area extra money should be appropriated for is the study of electric ground fault, as recommended by the State Grange Energy Advisory Committee.

Stray voltage is becoming a problem affecting growth and production of livestock Extension engineers have been spending more and more time with this problem. For this reason, the Grange will be recommending money be appropriated from ag research fund monies for the study of this problem.

The committee also called for Pennsylvania to work to assume primacy under the Safe Drinking Water Act.

Another recommendation calls for the state to enter into either loan or grant programs to enable small water companies to update their filtration and distribution systems. Many of these companies are, according to DER, having their dams condemned by the Army Corps of Engineers because they are unsafe. These grants or loans should be used toward fixing those facilities as well.

In light of the drought Eastern Pennsylvania suffered, the State Grange is recommending that an emergency water plan be drafted, taking into consideration the vital needs of all agricultural, poultry, and animals operations.

Also on the topic of water, the Committee called for Congress to have more appropriations to consturct water storages and control facilities in the entire northeast

Due to the conditions of the state's highways and bridges, and the weight restrictions on the same, the State Grange has endorsed a gasoline tax.

Monies from this tax should be targeted for bridge and road rehabilitation they said

They said the tax should be done on a percentage basis; an immediate percent increase equal to two cents per gallon, and a maximum of two cents per gallon increase per year; any change in the taxation will include a farm use exemption; the tax should be collected at the distributor level; the existing collection system for farm use continue; the Federal tax should be changed to a percentage basis, and the additional monies be used for road and bridge rehabilitation.

Under the Surface Mine Control and Reclamation Act, reclamation fees collected on a 35 cent per ton basis are placed into a abandoned mine reclamation fund. Approximately $500 million is now in this fund. Only $10.1 million has been appropriated by Congress to get reclamation started. The Grange, both at the State and the National level, will work to see this money released, so reclamation can begin.

Since 14'6" wide farm equipment cannot be moved on freeways, the Grange recommends this restriction be reduced so they are only restricted from Interstates.

Owing to some of the processing and cannery bankruptcies occurring around the state, as well as the bankruptcies of feed mills leaving the producer holding the bag, the Grange is recommending all segments of agriculture be protected by establishing a guarantee of payments through either bonding or letters of credit.

On the mushroom import problem, the Grange will seek a permanent solution. Legislation seeking mandate quotas, tariffs, and ad valorem taxes are necessary. Further, any monies collected through the tariffs should be recycled back to the industry for research and promotion.

Other related legislation the Grange seeks calls for labeling requirement on imported products that list ingredients, as is required in this country.

On ag preservation the Grange stipulated it would only support programs which are voluntary. Pilot programs, such as the deed restriction plan in Lancaster County, should be encouraged if local funding is provided.

Since the Federal ASCS funding program has not been increased, the State Grange Agriculture Committee has called for a state sharing plan (i e., terracing is now 75 percent Federal, 25 percent Individual; proposed: 75 percent Federal, 10 percent state, 15 individual).

The Farmers Home Administration has been unresponsive to farmers, Grangers said, Therefore, the Grange is calling for a separate bureau within FmHA to oversee its ag loans, with personnel with ag experience and training.

On ag research, the Grange is calling for direct appropriations to the University of Pennsylvania's New Bolton Center for both research and education. Funding is now available only for education

Several resolutions were passed calling for ASCS to re-instate a cost-sharing program on multiflora rose eradication.

The Williamsons are members of Bottle Run Grange, No. 1301, where Roy has been a member for 22 years, and his wife for six. Roy presently serves on the Lycoming County Executive Committee, while Linda is Bottle Run's Secretary

They have two children, Lisa, 12; and Dawn Marie, 6. The family attends the St. Matthews Lutheran Church, where Linda is a member of the Church Council, and a Sunday School teacher, and Roy is a member of the Property Committee.

Grange policy to develop as much hydroelectricity sites as possible in Pennsylvania was reaffirmed. Further, all existing hydroelectric generating facilities developed on publicly-owned ground and water should be owned by the nation, not the state or the local municipality

Support was also given to an increased effort on sulfur emmission research to make Pennsylvania a more marketable product

Legislators prepare to update farm policy

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Are farmers and their families being treated fairly with respect to income?

The heart of public debate on farm price and income policies focuses on this question. There is concern about farm family income compared to non-farm income; about farm costs that rise with inflation; about the instability of farm income; and the wide variability in size and income among farmers.

With the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977 set to expire next year, it's time to review our national farm price and income policies.

It's still true that the average farmer has less money to spend than the average non-farmer. Members of farm families often must supplement their incomes with off-farm jobs

Keeping our farmers farming is vital. U.S. farm policy has long been designed to boost farm income when necessary. But informed citizens disagree about just how much help, and what kind of help, is needed.

Congress will have many alternatives to consider when deliberations on future farm price and income legislation begins in January. Some of the policy alternatives are: 1 - continue the present program; 2 - fine-tune the present program; 3 - revert to previous legislation; 4 - establish a free market; 5 - encourage farmer group actions; and 6 - target programs to certain groups.

Each of these alternatives will affect farmers, consumers, taxpayers and foreign markets, explains Delaware extension community resource economics specialist Gerald F. Vaughn.

The Food and Agriculture Act of 1977 is commodity oriented, the specialist explains. Deficiency payments (income supports) are made directly to producers from the Federal Treasury whenever market prices are less than target prices.

The farmer-owned grain reserve is intended to be used together with nonrecourse loans to provide price stability for commodities subject to large fluctuations in production and use. Continuing these policies should provide reasonable price and income stability in agriculture.

However, since support benefits are distributed on the basis of production rather than need, some small farmers struggle financially while large corporations benefit from unneeded income supports.

As long as the economy suffers from inflation, the cost of entering farming will continue to increase. Price and income provisions of the 1977 act are not designed to counteract this problem.

There are many ways the present commodity-oriented program of price and income supports could be fine-tuned in 1981. But any upward shift in the nonrecourse loan rate would have to be evaluated in terms of its impact on world demand for U.S. agricultural products.

The greater the possibility of substitute supplies for U.S. farm commodities, the less attractive an increase in the loan rate becomes. In contrast, the higher the loan rate can be set, the higher the market price floor will be for all producers.

Adjusting target price levels does not directly disrupt market prices In general, however, the higher the target price, the less the income risk for individual producers. Over time, producers will respond to high target prices by increasing production.

Target prices may also be considered on the basis of cost to the government. A one-cent increase in the target price can amount to several million additional dollars in deficiency payments.

Farmer-held reserves are more accepted by farmers than government-held reserves. Farmers feel they have more opportunity to benefit from rising prices if they control the reserves. Consumers and foreign buyers tend to favor government-held reserves because commodities are automatically marketed at release price levels.

Thus, prices may be more stable and predictable.

Some people are reluctant to have a large set-aside or other production adjustment program. In the event of poor weather, total crop production could be reduced considerably. With world-wide population continuing to grow, both moral and price objections could be raised if substantial acreage were kept out of production.

Another alternative — although not very probable for 1981 — is that no new legislation would be enacted.

In that event, a number of individual commodity programs would revert to existing permanent legislation dating back to the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938 and the Agricultural Act of 1949.

Reverting to permanent legislation would generally mean that grain producers would no longer have the option of voluntary production controls or be eligible for deficiency and disaster payments. Nor would there be provision for a farmer-held reserve.

Farmers would tend to produce in relation to government controls, not market forces, when there are commodity surpluses. The long-standing questions of fairness and production efficiency would be raised as farmers are allocated their allotments and quotas

Some farm spokesmen have at times advocated a "free market" alternative. This usually means freedom from government intervention. Specific Congressional action would be necessary to establish a free market, since permanent statutory authority already provides for price supports once the current act expires.

A free market would result in considerable price and income instability. It would bring a survival of the fittest situation to much of production agriculture now protected by basic commodity programs.

In the short run, farm income would go down unless expanding foreign demand would absorb reserve stocks Farms with cash flow problems would be particularly hard hit. The absence of price and income supports may dampen the current land price spiral. A free market may encourage enterprise diversification, particularly in feed grain production areas

Consumers would face unstable food prices in a free market situation. As taxpayers they'd benefit from reduced government costs.

World trading prices for our major export crops would fluctuate more. Without a reserve program, the U.S. would be a less dependable supplier for foreign buyers.

For many years, farmers have tried to help themselves through the alternative of group action. Establishment of marketing and bargaining cooperatives and producer-initiated Federal and state marketing orders are noteworthy examples. Farmers have also formed general farm organizations and commodity groups to enhance their economic position

Legislation may be needed to give sanction to increased group action, particularly in such areas as collective bargaining and marketing orders. The most feasible way to implement farmer group action would be to continue on a commodity-by-commodity basis.

If farmer group action were to focus on keeping prices high, production capacity would exceed needs. Farmers themselves would have to decide who produces and how much each will produce.

Large and efficient producers would likely bid away production rights of smaller farmers in an effort to spread the cost of fixed resources over a larger number of production units. Small farms may have difficulty finding markets.

Farmer group action would not contribute to stability of production and prices unless farmers had both effective production control (which would require the cooperation of a majority of farmers) and a reserve for use when production was low.

Targeting government benefits to certain groups in production agriculture is another alternative that is sometimes proposed. For example, the government could provide direct payments to farm families with the lowest incomes to bring them up to the level of the non-farm population. Special credit programs could be instituted.

Another suggestion would make government benefits available only up to a certain level of production. Off-farm income could be taken into account when establishing government benefits for farmers. Or benefits could be directed only to beginning farmers or to those with high debt-asset ratios.

Perhaps benefits could be limited to a certain number of years for each farmer.

In general, government subsidies applied selectively have the advantage of targeting benefits to those most in need. The problem comes in determining which farmers should be eligible for benefits. Moreover, programs which direct payments to certain groups may benefit the most inefficient farmers while offering no protection at all for efficient ones

For a more complete discussion of farm price and income policies, contact Gerald Vaughn for Fact-sheet No 2 of the series devoted to food and agricultural policy issues for the 1980s It can be obtained free by writing to Vaughn at Agricultural Hall, University of Delaware, Newark, DE 19711

Welsh elected officer at Agri-Women convention

BY DEBBIE KOONTZ

HERSHEY — The American Agri-Women convention became a special treat for Emilie Welsh, one of Penn's Agri-Women, when she was elected second vice president of the national organization, Tuesday

Welsh, East Berlin, will be the first member of this state to hold an office for AAW Other than serving as publicity chairman, Welsh has never held an official position in Penn's Agri-Women, making the position a double honor.

The American Agri-Women attending the convention, 215 from 24 states, elected her at the Tuesday business meeting

This will be time well spent for me. I don't belong to any farm women groups, so I'm going to give all my spare time to this position Anything dealing with the promotion of agriculture is worthwhile to me," Welsh said.

Along with her husband James and her four sons, Gary, Tommy, Joey and Mike, she resides in York County on a dairy farm The Welsh family owns nearly 250 milking cows

I got involved in Penn's Agri-Women two years ago and have enjoyed it very much, she said

Welsh's duties as second vice president consist of overseeing the Public Relations chairman, the regional communicators, the Speakers bureau, and the Newsletter.

She will receive written reports from communicators and the chairman that she will be required to submit to the Executive board for approval. She also will be required to attend all executive board meetings with travel expenses reimbursed

Other business at the Tuesday meeting included adoptions of resolutions. Some of these were that American Agri-Women recommend that the Department of Agriculture concern itself with quality of food at all levels, both domestic and imported, with transportation of such foods and with much needed research for improving such food distribution, rather than recommendations for diets for a healthy nation of people of differing needs that American Agri-Women will support the Green Thumb" program of USDA weather service and will encourage the States to make the program known and available.

that American Agri-Women closely monitor quantity and quality of all dairy imports and strongly oppose any trade agreements which would increase dairy imports and depress the domestic market

That AAW support legislation which will allow the parents or family approved guardians of mentally or severly handicapped to have control over their future plans without court procedure

that AAW demand that the 1981 farm bill be thoroughly researched and revised to meet the needs of the modern American family farm system, and that a 1981 Farm Bill task force will keep the executive board and affiliated organizations informed as to the content, progress and timing of the bill and that AAW and its affiliated organizations will respond according to the needs of their membership

SYRACUSE, N Y — Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative, says spot milk sales to buyers who had not made prior arrangements for adequate supplies have shown marked improvement this fall season as a result of what it calls "aggressive marketing practices "

According to Howard McDonald, Eastern's General Manager, the cooperative has also negotiated several new annual sales contracts with buyers throughout the New York state and parts of New England. With Eastern's new mozzarella cheese plant not quite completed, the co-op had milk available and was able to take advantage of the situation, he noted.

"Construction of the Waverly plant" said McDonald "is now winding down to the point where we expect to be fully operational by late November or early December."

Eastern expects the plant will be able to operate at full capacity during the Christmas and New Year holidays, which is traditionally a heavy milk surplus period, he said.

McDonald observed the new Waverly cheese facility could be of extreme importance as plans are developed by Eastern to assure that the effect of a strike on its members will be minimal.

America's biggest farm customer speaks up

BRUSSELS, Belgium — Despite frequent claims that the European Economic Community's common agricultural policy is a threat to international trade, the Community increases its imports of US farm products every year.

The nine-nation group is by far the largest single customer of the US farm industry—taking more than a quarter of the total $10.6 billion US agricultural exports in 1978-79. In 1979-80, it is estimated by the U.S. Department of Agriculture that U.S. farm exports to the Community will rise to $3.5 billion out of total expected US farm exports worth $14.25 billion.

The major export items to the EC Nine are grains and soybean products and much smaller quantities and values of meat products, poultry, and specialty foods. Grain and soybeans go primarily to the EC animal production industry, with imports of corn from the United States running at an annual average of around 12 to 13 million tons.

Expansion in the EC dairy, pig, and poultry industries has been a major factor leading to a rapid expansion in the import of soybeans and soy meal into the Community. Imports of soybeans and meal currently total around 12 million tons a year, compared with little more than three million tons at the beginning of the 1970's.

Of the total $6.6 billion in US farm goods purchased by the Community in fiscal 1978, soybeans and other oilseed products accounted for $3 billion. Traditional feed grains accounted for $1.2 billion.

The other major items bought from the United States were animal products ($624 million), tobacco ($454 million), and fruit products ($174 million).

These figures dispute the frequent claim that the CAP has progressively locked out imports of US agricultural products from EC nations.

In the words of one agricultural trade expert, Dr. H. J. Kolshus, until recently European director of the US Feed Grains Council, "The locking out theory is a myth; the Community's agricultural trade system is based upon international trade with Community preference, not on external blockage."

But what about the other side of the story—EC agricultural exports to the United States? Here the picture is not so rosy, at least from the European point of view. EC farm exports to the United States—principally wine, wine products, and limited amounts of meat and dairy products—have, after remaining static in the 1970's, actually declined during the last five years with a consequent worsening of the US-EC agricultural trade balance.

From a balance in favor of the United States of $1.4 billion in 1968, the advantage rose to more than $7 billion in the late 1970's. Although probably 30 per cent of the EC deficit was due to the decline in the dollar's value against the European currencies during this period, the balance still increased substantially in America's favor.

Not unnaturally, the path of EC-US agricultural trade has not been particularly smooth over the last decade. Rivalry for markets—both their own and in third countries—has been an inevitable consequence of the expansion in agricultural trade that has resulted from the application of modern technology on both sides of the Atlantic during the late 1960's and the first half of the 1970's.

A particular bone of contention is what the Community regards as the massive concessions given to the United States through the trading arrangements for oilseeds. These allow annual imports of 12 million tons of soybeans and meal to enter the Community levy-free.

When the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade was negotiated, the Community agreed to no customs duties on soybeans and other oilseeds not produced in any significant quantity in the Community. This "GATT binding" has meant that US soybean imports have been able to enter the Community unhampered by the heavy import levies paid on other feed grains such as corn and barley.

EC cereal growers increasingly complain that US soybeans and meal are imported not only for the value of the protein they contain, but also for the carbohydrate content. The relatively low price of US soybeans thus allows them to displace substantial quantities of EC cereal in mixed animal feeds.

On the broader front, the so-called "grandfather clause" written into the original GATT in 1945—which allows the United States to control access to its market for agricultural products and to demand compensation for any interference with access to other GATT signatories' markets—is a particular thorn in the side of the EC farm export industry.

This GATT clause and its extensive use by the US Government in the first half of the 1970's brought US-EC agricultural trade relations to an all-time low point in the middle of the decade.

The tattered state of the relationship was typified by an exasperated outburst from then EC Agriculture Comissioner Petrus Lardinois. In a speech to the US National Soybean Processors Association, Lardinois said: "We have the impression that America is purposely treating agricultural trade as a one-way flow. You preach free trade when it comes to other people's internal markets, but you practice rigid protection at home. For us Europeans, America has become the most protected farm market in the world. Each time our traders discover some growth in an American market, measures are taken against them."

As an example, Lardinois quoted US action on a major EC export product—canned ham. Pointing out that Community exports to the United States had been cut by 30 per cent—from 104,000 tons to 72,000 tons—in the 1973-75 period, he argued that this regression had been entirely due to countervailing import duties levied by the US Government.

Since that time there has been intermittent sniping from both sides. Most recently, the Community restricted imports of US turkey-meat in retaliation for US duties on cognac and other EC food products.

There has been, however, fundamental improvement in US-EC agricultural trade relations since 1976-particularly since the completion of the Tokyo Round of multilateral trade negotiations in the GATT in 1979. In return for what one USDA expert calculates as significant concessions on $4 billion worth of agricultural trade among the 41 GATT signatories with whom the United States reached agreement, the US Government gave concessions on about $2.6 billion worth of trade on the US market—principally in animal products and grain.

The bulk of these concessions were given to developing countries, with the Community gaining limited improved access in cheese, beef, and lamb. But problems remain for both sides of the transatlantic partnership.

The continued increase in US soybean deliveries to the EC market are seen by a large section of the Community farm industry as a major cause of the current level of EC dairy surplus—now reaching, in raw milk terms—20 percent of total annual production.

The increasingly efficient dairy sector is using compounds based mainly on soy to boost its yields and thus produce milk for which there is no market. An influential section of the farm lobby argues that this increase in production would be impossible were it not for the availability of cheap soy meal.

This lobby continually argues that some form of restriction must be imposed on soy imports if the growth of dairy production is to be checked. Although the EC authorities have steadfastly stood against any conventional limitation of soya imports—import levies, quotas, or duties—Agriculture Commissioner Finn Gundelach told the European Parliament that he intends to discuss with the US Government some form of "auto-limitation" of soya deliveries to the European market.

What the Community would like to see is imports kept to their present level so as to limit the extent to which dairy production can be expanded.

US trade relations will of course be complicated by Community enlargement during the 1980's to include Greece, Spain, and Portugal.

Spain is a substantial importer of feed grains, and although it is initially likely to enjoy import levy concessions on corn imports from the United States, there will be increasing pressure from grain producers in the Community for Spain to accept more grain imports from the Community itself.

This pressure is likely to be intensified by the expected growth in the Community's production of feed wheat during the next 10 years.

The olive oil production of the three new member states is also going to produce particular complications. Recent estimates by the EC Commission suggest that EC support of this market could cost over $800 million by the late 1980's.

In an attempt to recoup some of this cost, it has been suggested by some members of the Commission, but not whole-heartedly accepted, that a production tax be imposed on all oil crushing plants. Were such an idea to be accepted, it would apply to soy oil as much as to Community olive oil.

But the one certain thing is that the Community's demand for animal products is unlikely to diminish, and probably will increase, as a result of enlargement. The extent to which this provides opportunities for US and other non-EC producers will depend more on the political atmosphere than on the agriculture and food industries themselves.

4-H'ers get creative with wood

NASHVILLE — For Trent Woods, a 17-year-old Nashville, Tenn. high school senior, crafting wood items comes naturally. Among his achievements are a glass-topped entomology curio cabinet with four slide-out cases and a large wall-sized bookcase with a lower cabinet made of rough-sawed poplar, both from original designs.

"I must have been born with a little sawdust in my blood, because my father, brother and grandfather are all woodworking craftsmen," says Wood[illegible] has crafted more items, most as a participant in the 4-H wood science program. He was one of six national winners in the program last year.

As part of his desire to preserve family heritage, the youth reconstructed and refinished an antique typeset drawer and refinished 16 pieces of furniture, and used his woodworking skills to help build a garage and a 26x30-foot woodworking shop with a complete second floor

4-H members in the wood science program work on a wide variety of creative projects They tackle such learn-by-doing projects as building bird and dog houses, making attractive gifts from scraps of wood, remodeling homes and businesses and making lumber from hardwoods grown on the family farm

Members develop skills in the selection and appropriate use of various types of wood and wood products, explore career opportunities associated with the manufacture and utilization of forest products, and develop an awareness of the business and economics of the forest products industry

Canadians to guarantee M-F refinancing

TORONTO, ONTARIO — Massey-Ferguson Limited reacted with great satisfaction to the joint announcement of the governments of Canada and Ontario that they "are prepared to guarantee the capital risk of a portion of the new equity investment' in the company from the private sector ' providing various conditions are met including a satisfactory degree of co-operation from existing lenders "

The company's refinancing plan comprises a total package of $700 million (Canadian) of preferred and common shares Of this total, $200 Million is proposed as common or preferred shares, carrying a government guarantee as to a substantial portion, which are to be purchased by an investor or investors acceptable to the governments $150 Million as convertible preferred shares to be purchased by Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce; and $350 Million as an underwritten public issue of convertible preferred shares guaranteed by the company's other lenders

Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce will undertake to purchase any unsold balance of the public issue up to $150 Million

The major participation of the Canadian sector should provide a strong incentive to other lenders around the world to give their support to enable this package to be realized.

The conditions to the governments' guarantee are expected to include company undertakings with respect to its Canadian operations and some restructuring of the company's existing debt.

This refinancing plan entails the infusion of $425 Million of new equity and the conversion of $275 Million of debt into equity

This action by the two governments is a crucial step which will allow the company to press ahead with negotiations with its principal lenders and prospective investors

Home TV tells farmer when to buy and sell

LANCASTER — After working his farm all day, Howard Martin turned on his home television to get the latest prices and trading figures for grains. Within minutes, he phoned his broker to cancel an order he had made that morning.

"Market conditions had changed enough so that I really would have regretted not cancelling that large order to sell," he said. "For the first time, I realized how important it is to have timely market information and quick access to it."

Howard Martin is a cash grain farmer who has 2000 acres in Kentucky. Like 199 other farmers from Todd and Shelby counties, he is getting commodity, weather and other information about agriculture every day from a special computer system hook-up to his home television set.

The system is called "Green Thumb" after a portable Green Thumb box (a memory unit) that retrieves data from a computer hook-up to home telephone and TV sets.

The pilot project is sponsored by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Science and Education Administration, the Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service, and the U S Department of Commerce National Weather Service.

In the system, a farmer using a selected code for the type of information he wants, calls the county extension office and is connected to a microcomputer there that receives information from a computer at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture

"The system is the first project of its kind anywhere in the country and is a unique and valuable decision-making tool for agriculture," said Howard Lehnert of the Science and Education Administration – Extension. He helped conceive the idea and nurtured its development.

"Day or night, farmers can get information at home from data sources throughout the country," he said.

According to Lehnert this is more than just a computer dissemination system for the farm.

"It is a demonstration of new technology, of electronics that has worked like a charm. It has limitless possibilities for business and commercial use because it is portable and less expensive than other view data systems," he said

John Ragland, associate director of the Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service, said farmers already are putting the system to many uses.

William Giltner, for one, has learned to apply the new technology in complex ways In combination with Extension's Green Thumb, he uses a micro-computer to handle field records and accounting, and to balance the feed ratio for each cow in his dairy herd operation.

Giltner has a 1200 acre diversified farm in Shelby County and has profited $2,800 by making corn future transaction decisions with the system. He frequently uses it for weather information This spring he was able to plant corn 20 days earlier than usual because the system told him that soil temperatures were warm enough.

"Green Thumb's memory unit has been very helpful in telling me how many good working days I have for planting, how many acres I can get planted, and it helps me in planning my field scheduling. I can watch the possibility of rain coming. I'll know I'm likely to get rained out in the middle of growing," Giltner said.

Ray Moss Tucker has used the system to keep track of the path of the alfalfa weevil and rainfall in different parts of the country.

Tucker, who grows corn, hay and tobacco on his 600-acre farm in Shelby county, also has gotten extended weather forecasts when he has missed news from other sources.

David Kerr, who raises hogs on a 200-acre farm in Todd County, said his wife has profited from valuable nutrition tips, menus and other items communicate to homemakers through the system.

The Kentucky project began operating in March with $300,000 in grant funds from the Science and Education Administration and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

Lehnert, who worked two years to set it up, envisions the project as the beginning of a nationwide system He said that a number of state extension offices currently are investigating ways of implementing the system with the cooperation of the private sector.

The first commodity information in the system was the regional market report from the Chicago Board of Trade and the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Since early September, market reports have included local and other information that they did not previously have on auctions and on supply, demand, movement and volume of commodities.

The new information is being supplied by the USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service. Drawing on its nationwide commodity network system, the marketing agency eventually will provide farmers using the system with national reports from many other markets.

The National Weather Service primarily provides short-term and extended forecasts and weather radar maps.

Extension specialists at the University of Kentucky now are providing reports on agricultural economics and occurrence of pests. Local extension offices are preparing information on 4-H and other community activities.

The Food Safety and Quality Service has ben providing home economics and nutrition information since May.

"Extension's Green Thumb project is the real wave of technology of the future," Ragland said. "For agriculture, it will mean more productivity. For farmers, it is the first logical step toward more comprehensive use of other computers that will help farmers and other consumers in their decision-making."

How to control smut in small grain

LITITZ — Each year hundreds of unsuspecting farmers across the country lose part of their small grian crop to smut And, unfortunately, by the time those insidious fungal spores have started to do their damage, it's already too late to stop them.

But smut problems on crops like wheat, oats and barley can be avoided by simply treating the seed before the disease gets a chance to start, according to a number of experts.

Although smut on small grains is caused by a variety of fungi and is usually not apparent to growers until late in the growing season, the problem is a relatively simple one to understand. The two basic types are loose smut and covered smut Loose smut is a seed borne disease whose spores eventually replace the seed of the plant. During flowering time, the smut spore is floating in the air It will land on the flower of a plant, then germinate and grow into the developing seed."

Following harvest, the loose smut fungus will overwinter in the seed as mycelium

After planting, it invades the young seedlings, replacing the kernels with fungal spores. Instead of producing grain, the kernels will then become a mass of fungal spores

Later, when the kernel membrane breaks, the smut spores will be released into the air, eventually landing on healthy plants and starting the cycle again

For covered smut, also known as bunt or stinking smut in wheat, the process is slightly different. Once again, the smut spores will infect the developing kernel and displace all tissue within the membrane, but instead of rupturing during flowering time, the membrane may remain intact until harvest.

At that time, the membrane will usually break, releasing black, powdery spores and a strong fishy odor. These spores begin to infect the plants as the seedlings emerge, eventually displacing kernel tissues and forming new bunt balls which will again break at harvest to renew the cycle.

Smut damage all depends on the level of infection of the seed

In the case of loose smut, if 30 percent of the seeds are infected, you'll probably lose almost 30 percent of your crop.

But with stinking smut farmers have two kinds of losses: the loss from the destruction of the head by the disease organism the same as you would with loose smut. But on top of that, they get a dockage when you take your crop to market.

Covered smut can be a major problem, especially because of the smell.

Some elevators won't even take grain infected with covered smut. Those who will take it give a dockage on the order of 10 to 20 cents per bushel and they also charge a grower to wash the grain to get rid of the smut.

There really aren't any good reasons for not treating seed There have been instances when 50 percent of the plants in a field are infected, completely ruining the crop. When seed treatments can control the problem almost 100 percent, it doesn't make sense not to treat

Until recent years, many growers had success in controlling smut with methyl and phenol mercurial fungicides But with the banning of mercury seed treatments in 1978, farmers and researchers have been turning increasingly to other compounds

Carboxin is a [illegible] that will go inside the germinating seed and control smut, he said Captan will work externally on young plants to control seed decay and seedling blight

Pheasant production due at turkey farm

TROUT RUN — Pheasant production in Pennsylvania will get a boost in 1981 when the former turkey farm in Lycoming County is converted to a facility for raising additional ringnecks.

In August of 1979, the Game Commission decided to limit the production of turkeys at the game farm while at the same time stepping up the wild bird trap-and-transfer program.

It was indicated that when the Game Commission deemed it necessary, farm turkey production would be eliminated and the facility would be converted to other uses.

This year the number of farm turkeys produced was reduced from the 6000 level of the past to just 4200 birds. With the recent rapid expansion of the wild turkey range, game managers had a difficult time this year finding suitable release sites where the 4200 farm birds would not be in conflict with wild populations.

As a result of this year's experience, game managers had to consider two options in looking at future plans for the facility: either convert the farm to the production of other game birds, or further decrease the number of turkeys produced.

Regardless of the numbers of birds produced at the farm, the annual operating cost at the Lycoming County facility is about $210,000. Producing 6000 turkeys rounds out to an approximate cost of $35 per bird

Production of 4200 birds in 1980, at the rate of previous costs, rounds out to an approximate cost of about $50 per turkey for this year

If the Game Commission produced and distributed only 2000 birds in 1981, the cost per turkey would approach $105, because of fixed operating costs.

The Game Commission said it feels this cost is unreasonably high, and an unjustifiable use of the sportsmen's dollars.

Game farm turkeys have been produced in the past in an effort to "sweeten the pot" and provide birds for hunters in locations where they are not normally found in nature. Game farm birds were not produced with the idea that they would reproduce in the same numbers as true wild turkeys

Turkeys which come from game farms, produced under "controlled" conditions, lack those characteristics necessary for survival and reproduction normally found in wild birds

When game managers want to expand turkey populations in suitable habitat devoid of birds, the best method is to trap wild turkeys in areas of abundance and transfer the birds into the new or potential range

Unlike birds which have come from game farms, wild birds take hold in natural surroundings much more rapidly and reproduce at normal rates.

Past experience and research in many states show the relative merits of the two methods of turkey production.

For instance, over a period of years, thousands of game farm turkeys were released in the South Mountain area of southcentral Pennsylvania. After release of game farm birds was stopped for several years, the area again was devoid of turkeys

Then, several dozen "wild" turkeys were trapped in other areas of the state where the birds were abundant, and released in the South Mountain area. The birds became established quickly, reproduction soared, and today there are self-sustaining flocks of wild turkeys in the South Mountain area

The trap-and-transfer procedure is an ongoing part of the state's overall turkey management program, and will continue in the future. In the past, many of the birds were taken from the northcentral counties and relocated in southcentral Pennsylvania, as well as eastern and western sections of the state.

But, there may be occasions in the future when birds will be trapped in sections of abundance in eastern or western Pennsylvania and released in the northecentral area, as populations fluctuate and the need arises.

In 1979, more than 100 birds were trapped in the wild and transferred to understocked ranges.

Generally, the key element in the trapping of wild birds is weather. Last winter, being a relatively open and mild period, was not particularly good for trapping operations.

Given any kind of a break in weather and other conditions this winter, the Game Commission should be able to further increase the number of birds taken in the wild and moved to potential habitat — habitat which is likely to support self-sustaining populations of birds in the future

While it may cost considerably more than a hundred dollars to trap and transfer a single wild turkey, the benefits far outweigh the costs. Two hens and a gobbler transferred in the wild can reproduce an entire new population.

The reproductive ability of three wild birds — trapped and transferred — couldn't be matched by twenty farm-raised turkeys which — even if they escaped the hunter — often don't make it through the first winter.

This year the Game Commission produced a record number (223,200) of pheasants at four game farms, but the demand for additional ringnecks cannot be met at the four facilities currently in use. The four farms are over-taxed, and more birds could not be produced.

Game managers are hoping that the conversion of the turkey farm to ringneck production will mean an additional 35,000 to 40,000 pheasants during the next few years. When the conversion is fully completed at the farm, it may even be possible to produce more than the 40,000 pheasants currently envisioned.

Horse backpacking guidelines offered

LITITZ — Horse backpacking provides a great opportunity to get back to nature. However, basic skills and knowledge can make it a more enjoyable experience.

Members in the national 4-H horse program, conducted by the Cooperative Extension Service and supported by the American Quarter Horse Association and the Insurance Company of North America, suggest these guidelines for planning a horse backpacking trip:

- Begin with essential equipment until you become an experienced packer. A pack saddle, good quality pad or blanket and panniers are the foundation of a pack. Remember weight carried in saddle bags should be kept to a minimum, rarely exceeding 10 pounds.
- Pack horses should be fed daily. Feed can be carried in the bottom of each pannier to keep the load's center of balance as low as possible. If pack trips are planned for relatively open spaces, ample amounts of grass may be available for grazing.
- Make sure water will be available for your horses. Hard-working horses need up to 10 gallons of water a day. For each rider, carry at least one quart of water, preferably two.
- The type of food carried depends on length of the trip. Most fresh foods should be used within 48 hours. Canned foods combined with non-perishable products, like biscuits, pancake mix, dried rice and dehydrated foods last longer, but a combination of freeze-dried, canned and dehydrated products is suggested.
- Cooking and eating utensils should be lightweight, versatile and durable. Remember to pack matches, liquid detergent, can openers and disposable products, like paper towels, and toilet paper. Also, carry an axe, shovel and cooking grates.
- Each packer should remember to bring a bedroll, including some kind of mattress or pad for the sleeping bag.
- A well-stocked first-aid kit is essential, and it should contain items for most minor emergencies.
- When selecting pack horses for the trip, remember they should have good confirmation and be interchangeable with those that are ridden. Pack horse should have quite temperment, be well-trained, strong, surefooted and particularly sound in their feet and legs.

Horse backpacking is one of the many activities of members in the horse program. Other projects include participating in horse drill teams and horse shows-showing and judging, line driving, competitive trail riding, hot horseshoeing and sharing skills in a horseback riding program for the handicapped.

Ag official says extension must focus on new areas

SULPHUR SPRINGS, W Va. — "Extension family education programs can, and must, take the lead in teaching skills people need to promote individual growth and development and to meet needs for food, fuel and housing," Anson R. Bertrand, director of science and education for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, said Wednesday.

Bertrand spoke to members of the National Association of Extension Home Economists at their annual meeting here this morning.

"Today, extension must focus its attention on meeting new social and economic demands facing people who live in both rural and urban areas. Extension must provide a broad scope of educational assistance to help them identify needs, make decisions and utilize resources to improve their quality of living," he said.

Now, more than ever, USDA's Science and Education Administration research and education programs must work together to find answers to serious questions involving energy, nutrition, family resource management, human development, housing, taxes, food, fiber and health and to delivery those answers to the people we serve, said Bertrand.

Extension - a partnership of federal, state and local governments - provides "a rich base of knowledge for every county," he said.

County home economists need to be involved in public policy formation, said Bertrand. "In coming years your input on a number of tough issues facing the family will be needed to develop sound public policy," he said.

These areas, he said, include the nature and dimensions of personal space and the kind and quality of community services; the need for conserving resource supplies and protecting environmental quality and the means of doing so; and information resources that make sure sources of information are sound and credible.

Bertrand said scientific research findings must be transferred to the public if we are to improve the quality of life.

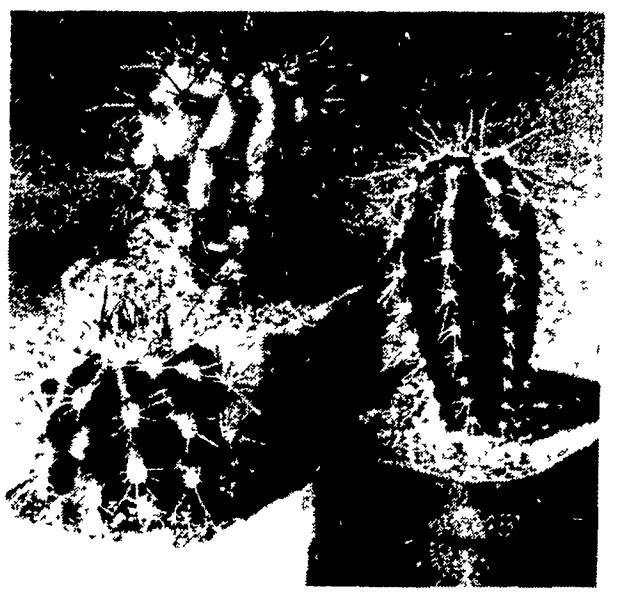
'An essential role of extension home economists is to provide the link between the family and the research, both in interpreting research findings to the family and conveying problems needing research to the scientific community," he said.

The fact that people can be reached directly in their homes and involved through leadership roles in the extension system is not only important to extension's success, but also the envy of many agencies and groups who wish to use extension's delivery system to reach consumers, Bertrand said.

"In home economics and nutrition, a Gallup Poll showed 17 million persons — about 10 percent of the U.S. adult population — have participated actively at least once in some aspect of these extension home economics programs," he said.

"I am confident that as extension home economics proceeds on a course of providing new programs, developing new and innovative evaluation systems, and responding to the public policy issues confronting families, that its 66-year history of success will not be broken or diminshed," Bertrand said.

Grow cactus for fun



Cactus is a treat gardeners of all ages can grow indoors that's fun, foolproof and carefree. These are a sample of Burpee Seed's cactus selection.

DOYLESTOWN — What can gardeners of all ages grow indoors that's fun, foolproof and carefree? "Cactus", says Jeannette Lowe, Burpee Seed Company horticulturists and indoor gardener. "We've had a pot of cactus growing on our office window sill in bright sunshine over a radiator for several years and these plants are certainly thriving on neglect."

Once cactus seedlings are up and growing, you can forget about them. These desert denizens like dry air and heat from raditors or vents. This arid atmosphere, prevalent in most homes during winter when furnaces are running, is difficult for many other types of houseplants but ideal for cactus.

Summer heat suits them too. They are native to desert areas with very little rainfall any time of the year. This means you can forget about watering cactus for a month or more at a time...no "plant sitting" problems during vacations or trips.

A mixture of cactus varieties is fun to grow. You then have the surprise of seeding many different types develop. Will they be barrel-like, columnar, branched or some other shape?

If you prefer individual varieties, there are exotics such as Saguaro, Organ Pipe and Native's Comb...to mention a few. All develop slowly into miniatures of their desert counterparts and all are spiny. Be careful to keep your distance from the sharp thorns or wear protective gloves when you are handling the plants.

HOW TO GROW

Plant cactus seeds indoors at any time of the year. Sow them evenly and thinly in pots or flats filled with planting formula, potting soil or a porous mixture such as one part sieved soil to one part sand. Cover the seeds lightly with the planting material and keep it slightly moist. Plants emerge in about 14 to 28 days During this germination (seed-sprouting) period, even moisture is necessary for good results.

When the catcus seedlings show their first spines, it's time to transplant them to individual pots, or perhaps you would like to group several different types in larger containers Be sure there is good drainage from the bottom...either a hole, or a layer of gravel, stone or broken pieces of crock about an inch deep. Also use a soil mixture that drains fast. One part planting formula or sieved soil to one part sand or gravel works well and will make your cactus feel at home, as if in the desert.

Water the transplanted seedlings to settle them in, then wait 2 weeks or longer before you water again Grow your cactus in plenty of light. A sunny windowsill, a spot under plant lights, or a place in a greenhouse with a fairly dry atmosphere all are fine. If you live in frost-free areas, you also can grow catcus in an outdoor garden They're ideal for arid conditions in the southwestern United States.

Go away for a month and forget about your cactus They'll still be thriving when you return. Give them a good watering, but pour off any excess in the receptacles below the pots or containers.

Strause takes two top spots in Berks 4-H beef show

BY LAUREL SCHAEFFER
Staff Correspondent

HAMBURG — Taking top honors at the Annual Berks County Baby Beef Sale this year was 16 year old Carol Strause, R2 Hamburg.

Carol's entry was an Angus X Chianina Cross weighing in at 1215 pounds which placed first in the light-heavyweight class and was subsequently named heavyweight champion.

Reserve grand champion honors went to another heavyweight entry, exhibited by Darlene Dietrich, also of Hamburg.

Carol Strause was especially pleased with her winnings this year which included first place in fitting for ages 16 and over. This was the first time in eight years showing that this young lady, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Strause, won Grand Champion honors.

She came quite close however, at the Reading Fair last month when her steer captured the reserve grand honors there.

Carol is an eleventh grade student at Hamburg Area High School.

Reserve Grand Champion steer was a Limousine x Shorthorn cross weighing 1175 pounds, placing second to the champion in the light-heavyweight class.

Its exhibitor, Darlene Dietrich, is the 18 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Dietrich. Darlene graduated from Hamburg Area High School last year.

This young lady placed first in the showmanship contest for 16 years and over and was second in fitting.

Buyer of the Grand Champion was T.M. Landis, Maryland, paying $1.05 per pound. Reserve Grand Champion was bought by Hamilton Bank, Reading,

Northampton Farmers Union to talk milk, land use

EASTON — A mandatory statewide milk referendum and the dwindling acreage of available farm land are concerns of area farmers. So the Northampton County Farmers Union will hold an open forum for its members and the general public to discuss these issues.

The Farmers Union policy meeting is slated for 8 p.m., Wednesday, November 19, at the Chesterfield Manor on Tatamy Road, Easton

The milk referendum, if enacted, calls for a mandatory contribution form all dairymen to a generic advertising program for the milk industry in Pennsylvania The first draft of the referendum was released October 22

According to Northampton County Farmers Union President Robert Hoyer, there are several provisions fo the referendum which do not coincide with existing Farmers Union criteria for check-off programs

"We want to find out exactly where the dairymen of our county stand ont he referendum" said Hoyer "It's an excellent opportunity for dairymen and the general public to understand what the milk referendum would mean to them in dollars and cents"

The Pennsylvania Farmers Union is participating on the Department of Agriculture committee drafting the referendum

Industrial development in Northampton County has taken a bite out of available farm land Rezoning ordinances have turned pasture lands into commercial properties in some instances.

"We're losing some of the most fertile and productive farm land in the countr[illegible] explained Hoyer. "Our meeting will provide the farmer and the general public a forum in which to speak on industrialization"

All members of the Farmers Union and the general public are invited to attend the November 19th meeting However, only current Northampton County farmers Union members are eligible to vote on policy recommendations

Sheepmen name blueprint coordinator

DENVER, Colo. — George A. Ahlschwede of San Angelo, Texas, has been named coordinator of the American Sheep Producers Council Blueprint program, according to an announcement made Thursday by ASPC Executive Director Richard D. Biglin.

Ahlschwede, a nationally-known sheep production expert, is presently chief extension specialist with Texas A & M University, providing educational support to county agents and to producers in the areas of sheep and goat nutrition, breeding and selection, reproduction, disease and parasite control, and wool and mohair preparation. In his new capacity with the ASPC, Ahlschwede will continue his work in Texas along with coordinating Blueprint activities across the country.

Blueprint is the American sheep industry's name for a plan of action to reserve the decline in sheep numbers, now set at about 12.5-million, in the United States. Blueprint goals include improving the industry, its production and its marketing practices.

Ahlschwede holds the Ph.D. degree in Animal Breeding from Kansas State University and is the author of more than 30 papers on the subject of sheep raising. He is a native of Crete, Nebraska, and grew up on a crop and livestock farm

Ahlschwede is a nationally-recognized sheep judge, and has judged major sheep show from coast to coast He has assisted the U.S Feed Grains Council with their foreign sheep developmental programs in Iran, Iraq, Syria and Romania, and has worked as a consultant on a sheep development project in Brazil.

"George Ahlschwede brings to the Blueprint program not only his tremendous knowledge of the sheep industry, but his energy and enthusiasm, as well as his administrative ability," Biglin said in making the announcement

"We look forward to working with him to extend the Blueprint-Stage II program to every state in the nation. Through his efforts, the sheep industry is certain to meet the goals we have set for ourselves"

Maryland has new tool to fight mastitis

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Mastitis is the most costly disease in the dairy industry. The National Mastitis Council estimates the economic loss is $2 billion yearly. Maryland alone loses $23.5 million per year

The largest cost to the dairyman is in lost milk production, says Robert R. Peters, extension dairyman at the University of Maryland. He estimates that 10 to 15 percent of production potential is never achieved because of subclinical mastitis This type of mastitis accounts for over 90 percent of mastitis cases.

Subclinical mastitis is practically impossible to diagnose without testing the cow's milk. The milk and udder of infected cows appear normal; therefore, dairymen assume these cows are healthy and producing at their highest.

The National Mastitis Council estimates that 40 to 50 percent of the cows in a typical herd are infected with mastitis. The average cow with subclinical mastitis produces 12.5 percent less milk, a $294 loss per infected cow (using current milk prices of $13.05/cwt, and average milk production of 15,000 lb/cow/year). In a 40 cow herd, for example, the dairyman loses $5,292 per year without realizing it.

Maryland Dairy Herd Improvement Corporation now offers a new option to assist dairymen in managing udder health. The somatic cell count program, Peters says, is designed to initially established the extent of mastitis infections in a herd and later to serve as a constant monitor of each cow's udder health.

The program costs 12 cents per sample per month and has been operating in Maryland since October 1. A herd with 40 cows would pay $19.20 per month to use the SCC program. This is a small amount when compared with the $5,292 losses from subclinical mastitis, Peters says.

The SCC measures the number of body cells found in milk from individual cows. The two major types of somatic (body) cells found in milk are epithelial cells (sloughed secretory cells from the mammary gland) and leucocytes derived from blood. Leucocytes are present in milk to help the mammary gland fight against mastitis or other infection.

Normal milk contains less than 300,000 somatic cells per milliliter. If the udder is injured or infected, the somatic cell count increases dramatically.

A high SCC would indicate that a problem has developed in the herd management. However, a particular SCC value will not identify the mastitis problem

Peters recommends the following for a sound mastitis control program:

Proper installation, use and maintenance of milking equipment and at least an annual inspection by a qualified person.

Proper milking procedures including teat dipping with an effective teat dip.

Treating all quarters of all cows at drying off with an effective dry cow product based on bacterial sensitivity and culture results

Good sanitation in the housing area of lactating and dry cows and also in the maternity area

Culling any cow with a SCC of 1,000,000 or more throughout lactation if she does not respond to treatment.

Conducting a thorough check for subclinical mastitis before purchasing lactating cows.

Housing replacement heifers in individual pens or trying them during milk feeding to prevent the spread of mastitis-causing organisms to the immature mammary gland of the suckled heifer.

Truck farmer controls product from planting to pricing

PINE FORGE — Gene Wilcox is in an enviable position for a farmer. Wilcox, his wife, Mary, and daughter, Connie, own and operate a direct marketing truck farm on the fertile, gentle, rolling ridges of eastern Berks County.

Having control of his product from the planting to the pricing helps Wilcox maintain a very low debt ratio in the family business.

Wilcox was raised on a beef farm southeast of Quakertown. His father raised tomatoes under contract and the family sold some at a roadside stand along with orchard fruit.

In 1946, his father bought the present 240-acre Wilcox farm in order to be nearer to the fruit supply. His father died in 1947 and Wilcox entered a partnership with his mother. He bought her share of the farm last year, making his wife and daughter full partners in the operation.

The family's retail business began in 1960, when they set-up an 8' by 10' portable roadside stand for tomatoes and sweet corn. The stand was an instant success and in 1961, Wilcox used a Production Credit Association loan to build his roadside market. In 1975, he used another PCA loan to double the size of the building.

Wilcox raised beef until 1972, when caring for them conflicted with the operation of the roadside market. He switched to hogs but gave them up in 1976, when he learned some good customers didn't like the smell.

On a typical weekday the market sells more than 8,000 ears of sweet corn and over 200 head of cabbage. Wilcox picks his vegetables daily - especially the sweet corn which is put in the cooler immediately to prevent the natural sugars from turning into starch.

The farm is fully irrigated. Wilcox grows 130 acres of sweet corn, 15 acres of tomatoes, and 15 acres of potatoes. Other vegetables grown include lima beans, popcorn, pumpkins, squash, onions, green beans, peas, asparagus, cantaloupe, peppers, cucumbers, brussels sprout, cauliflower, broccoli and strawberries.

Always willing to try something new, Wilcox sold fresh flowers this summer. When something doesn't sell well, however, Wilcox drops it. Nor does he grow fruit on the farm, buying it instead from neighbors.

Berks County honors top 4-H shepherds

Robert Herr, speaker; Andy MacKay, Master of Ceremonies; Valerie Ernst, exhibitor of the grand champion market lamb; and Fred Bube, reserve champion, pose at the Berks 4-H sheep banquet.

BY LAUREL SCHAEFFER
Staff Correspondent

LEESPORT — Berks County 4-H Sheep and Lamb Club held their first awards banquet last Friday at the Berks County Agricultural Center.

Highlighting the evening were the presentation of awards and trophies to 4-H members and guest speaker, Robert Herr, Agricultural Chairman of Garden Spot High School.

Herr discussed the sheep industry in general and as 4-H projects. The awards presented to the 4-H members were earned during the County Round-up held earlier in the season.

Valerie Ernst, Sinking Spring was cited for her Grand Champion Market Lamb by Mr. and Mrs. Ian MacKay, Boyertown; while Fred Bube was presented with an award for exhibiting the Reserve Grand Champion by Fisher Home Improvement, Robesonia.

Other award recipients were: Lisa Bube- champion senior fitter and reserve senior showman; Liane Haas, Douglasville- reserve senior fitter and champion senior showman; Elaine Heffner, Fleetwood champion intermediate fitter and reserve intermediate showman; James Heffner, Fleetwood- reserve intermediate fitter and champion intermediate showman; Fred Bube- champion junior fitter; Glenn Heffner, Fleetwood- reserve junior fitter; Wendy Rachor, Barto- champion junior showman; Marianne Yanos, Douglasville- reserve junior showman.

The family also rent 150 acres and raises 50 acres of field corn as a cash corn. Wilcox says he wouldn't consider buying any more land because housing demands in the area have pushed prices to the $1500 to $2500 per acre range.

"Because we have enough land, I'm not as concerned as many farmers about land prices," he said.

"We double-crop most of our vegetables and we could always pull the 50 acres out of field corn. Our cabbage is grown in four-foot rows. We could narrow them up."

With higher than average start-up costs, Wilcox says he depends on a PCA line of credit for production capital.

Looking to the future, Wilcox sees demand for his products increasing.

"It's not just in having more customers, but also in what people are eating, he said.

Take eggplant - it didn't used to sell but now you can sell all you can pick. Vegetables are definitely good for you and people are willing to pay for a good product.

"We get to meet a lot of people," he added smiling. "It's a lot of fun."

KUTZTOWN — Jeffery Miller, R3 Kutztown, has been named chairman of the 1980 membership campaign for the Berks County Farmers' Association. Also named was Dwane Wardecki of Hamburg, R1 as co-chairman.

This announcement was made Monday by John K. Kooker, Jr., President of the local farm group.

Kooker said last year this general farm organization was able to attain a membership of 1151 farm families and was named the "All-Star" or top county in the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association, a feat reported at our annual meeting last month.

A mail campaign for membership has been underway since the beginning of October and is to be followed by a "clean-up" and new member drive starting November 10th. That date has been set for a "Kick-off" meeting to organize township captains and workers for the campaign.

The November 10th kick-off meeting was held at the Agricultural Building, Bern Township.

The speaker for the event was County Commissioner Anthony Carobello, an associate member, who talked about "Farm Organizations and County Government."

"Farmers are realizing more and more the importance of organizing and participating in groups such as ours to be a 'Voice of Agriculture' and to insure the future of this vital segment of our economy," Kooker concluded.

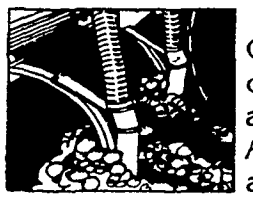
Switch fertilizer tanks
to a Calumet vacuum tank with soil injector

Liquid hog manure can save thousands of dollars in commercial fertilizer costs. So it makes sense to preserve that value with good management.

That's why Calumet recommends pairing our vacuum tank with a 2 or 4-shank Calumet soil injector. Soil plow down retains about four times the nitrogen lost with surface spreading, plus reduces odor and runoff.



Stop in to see the full line of Calumet vacuum tanks — in capacities from 1180 to 4500 gallons and choice of two vacuum pumps. And ask about the benefits of using a Calumet 2 or 4-shank soil injector.

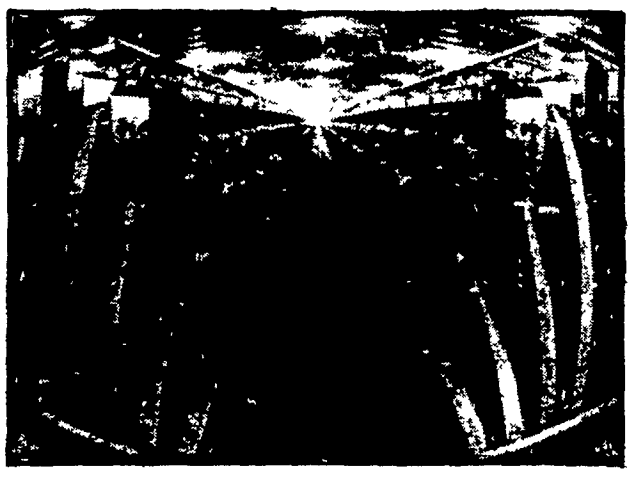
REVERSE CAGE LAYER SYSTEM

★ LESS BIRD STRESS

The system has been designed for bird comfort! Each bird has her place at the feed trough. Each has easy access to water. Obstruction to light and the flow of air have been greatly reduced, providing more uniform ventilation and lighting for every bird. Combined with Chore-Time's automatically controlled air inletting system, you get a layer house environment designed for bird comfort and the resulting better production.

★ MINIMIZES FEED WASTE



Not only the physical shape of the feed trough, but the operation of the feeder has been engineered to reduce feed waste. The trough shape cuts down on feed loss from "raking" and "billing," while the feeder has been specifically designed for Chore-Time's programmed and performance feeding concept.

To replace SBA emergency loans

FmHA now can make loans to borrowers with other options

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Farmers Home Administration now has authority to make unsubsidized emergency disaster loans to farmers who are able to get credit from commercial lenders.

This new authority, granted recently, means the USDA agency will serve credit-worthy farmers previously served by the Small Business Administration, said Alex P. Mercure, assistant secretary of agriculture for rural development.

It is expected to add an estimated $400 million to FmHA's emergency loan volume for fiscal year 1981 October 1, 1980. - September 30, 1981, Mercure said.

The new authority represents a major change for Farmers Home Administration, Mercure said. Up to now, he said, the agency has made loans only to borrowers who meet the USDA criterion of being unable to get credit from private lenders. The change affects only loans made by the agency in designated areas hit by natural disasters for losses caused by these disasters.

Farmers Home Administration also makes emergency loans for annual production expenses and major adjustments in farming operation. These loans will continue to be made only to farmers unable to get credit elsewhere.

Authority to serve credit-worthy borrowers was provided Farmers Home Administration by the Small Business Act of 1980, which became law on July 2, 1980. The intent of the law, said Mercure, is that Farmers Home Administration take over the emergency farm lending carried out by the Small Business Administration to the fullest extent possible.

Regulation implementing the new insured emergency loan authority were effective October 22. Farmers Home county offices, which have been accepting and processing – but not approving – applications for emergency disaster loans from farmers able to get credit elsewhere, now will be able to approve and close these loans.

The new law: affects only farmers suffering losses from natural disasters commencing on or after July 3, 1980, who are located in designated disaster areas.

Limits loans to these farmers to $500,000 or the actual amount of loss per borrower, whichever is less.

Severly restricts, but does not eliminate, Small Business Administration disaster loans to farmers able to get credit elsewhere will be eligible for consideration for Small Business Administration loans for losses to their farming operations only if they have been turned down for such loans by Farmers Home because of legal restrictions. Loans to farmers for losses to residential housing still may be made by either the Small Business Administration or Farmers Home.

Provides that Farmers Home emergency disaster loans to farmers able to get credit elsewhere will be made at a rate of interest reflecting the costs of money to the federal government – currently 11.75 percent. The interest rate for Farmers Home emergency actual loss loans to farmers unable to get credit elsewhere will continue at five percent.

Farmers suffering production losses from disasters commencing on or after July 3 and able to get credit elsewhere may apply for loans at their local county Farmers Home offices. Those with housing losses only still have the option of applying to either Farmers Home or the Small Business Administration.

Farm Talk

Jerry Webb

Each year farmers around the country spend untold dollars on whiz-bang kinds of products that are supposed to make their soil more productive. These "additives" have been around for years, repackaged, relabeled and re-introduced now and then. But the principle is the same – some kind of product that can be added to the soil to make it grow better crops.

Some of these "snake oil" products have common characteristics:

They're usually sold in small quantities and applied at a very low level;

They cost a lot per ounce or per gallon;

They're usually not available through reliable farm supply stores;

They're not backed by national advertising and sales campaigns;

They usually contain so-called "secret" ingredients;

They lack a crediatbility base – that is several years of testing and research and farmer experience.

Reputable agricultural researchers, including those in many land grant colleges and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, have experimented with these soil additives over the years and just about every one has proven worthless. And yet farmers continue to buy them, and that just amazes me.

Here in this area, with the research and extension arms of several land grant universities, the facilities of various Department of Agriculture units and the knowledge and testing of numerous reputable companies, farmers still buy an unknown product from an unknown salesman who just happens to be in the barnyard.

If those additives really worked and really saved fertilizer or seed dollars, don't you think extension agents would be their biggest supporters? And wouldn't agricultural researchers hawk their virtues at field days and winter meetings? And wouldn't other farmers be willing to admit that they had tried them with good success?

Unfortunately, soil additives seem to be in the same category as gas savers for automobiles. You always hear those tales about the miracle carburetors that have been invented, only to be bought up by large oil companies who don't want to see the American motorist get a break.

Some salesman will tell you the same thing about his miracle products – that the universities are in cahoots with the fertilizer companies and therefore won't test these miracle products or won't give them good recommendations even though they know the products work.

Well, if you believe that line then how can you believe anything that the ag colleges or the Department of Agriculture say? Their only purpose is to help farmers to be more productive and if there were a miracle product they would be the ones who would tell you about it.

Consider the other innovations – time, energy, and money savers – that have come to agriculture over the past decade. Didn't the ag colleges test them? And weren't the extension agents out there plugging away, trying to get you to try them? New varieties, new chemicals, new tillage techniques.

Consider no-till as an example. I know extension and research workers at the University of Delaware were very active in the early seventies developing and modifying this technology for Delaware conditions. And as they demonstrated sucess with it, farmers began "experimenting." But they weren't really experimenting. They were simply demonstrating to themselves what the research and extension folks already told them – that no-till was, in fact, a way to save energy and labor and produce equal or better crops.

Believe me, when soil additives that work are available, the ag college experts are going to know about them and have data to support their claims. So when the snake oil peddler comes around touting his miracle products and asking for your hard-earned bucks, suggest that he talk first with the soil scientists at your state university.

If they'll recommend his product then maybe you'll consider it along with other good products and chemicals that have been recommended.

Some states have laws protecting farmers from fly-by-night salesmen with fly-be-night products. But most haven't made the effort because they haven't had big problems. These quick buck artists typically come into an area, sell a few gallons or pounds and then move on before too many questions are asked.

It's not until much later that state officials even find out about the problems. And usually the cost, shared by a number of farmers, has been relatively small.

So you can't look to the government for control. It must be done by the farmers themselves by simply not buying anything that doesn't have a proven record of success

fiberdome CALFhutches start them out right

Raising calves is a tricky business That's why modern calf raisers are going to individual hutches to help save more calves by cutting down on pneumonia, scours and hoof problems Properly made hutches help eliminate the dampness, crowding and poor ventilation that plague many calf barns

You can be assured of this kind of healthier environment with Fiberdome CALFhutches Their unique one-piece construction of heavy gauge fiber glass makes them weatherproof, so they will last indefinitely with normal care No joints for moisture and bacteria to creep through A white gel-coat finish keeps them cool in summer

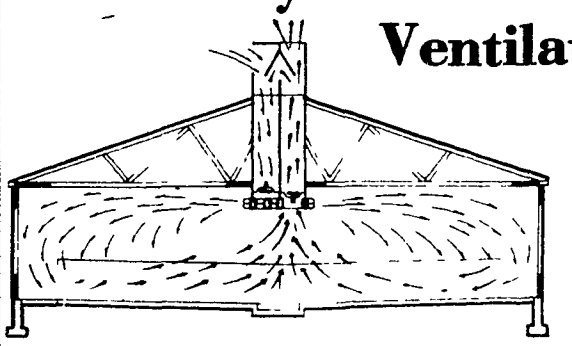
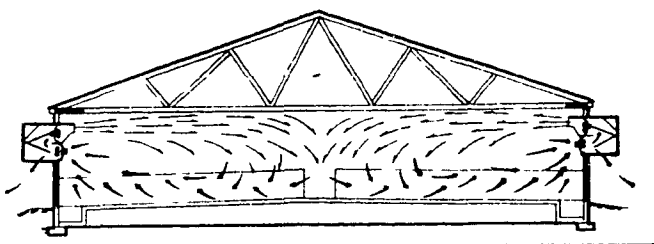
'MARTIN-AIR' PATENT PENDING

Fully Automatic Total Confinement Ventilation Systems





A unique air blending process provides even temperatures and controlled, draft-free air flow

- Reduce animal stress
- End temperature fluctuations
- Reduce drug costs
- Reduce incidence of pneumonia and disease
- Reduce labor
- Lower condensation
- Confine manuring

Why The 'Martin-air' System is best for you

The success of Martin-air systems rests on a different concept than that used by most ventilation designs Others work by exhausting air completely then drawing cold air from outside—usually at the other end of the barn. Martin-air units use an exclusive damper system which mixes fresh air and exhaust air so the output of the unit is never more than 4°F different from the room temperature And, at any given spot in a properly designed barn, the temperature should seldom vary more than 1°.

The Martin-air principle is simple and effective. Thermostats control fan speed and a dampered mixing chamber to blend fresh air with warm air. Constant circulation throughout the building maintains uniform temperature, eliminates drafts and reduces condensation to provide a dry environment.

'Martin-air' can fill your specific needs

No matter what your livestock confinement requirements, a Martin-air System can be designed and installed to fulfill your needs Systems are designed to create a stable, draft-free environment based on building architecture, insulation, number of animals, and all heat sources Successful installations are operating in many calf barns, dairy houses, hog, poultry and rabbit operations and even horse barns

Martin-air units are available in a wide range of ceiling or wall-mount models and each installation is carefully designed by ventilation specialists

Martin-air ventilation can be installed in any existing building you may be using for livestock confinement, even old bank barns

The Dairy Business

By Newton Bair

IS BIGGER ALWAYS BETTER?

We are beginning to detect some fallacies in the widely held notion that progress in the dairy business is measured by size. Maybe it's time to take a look at some of the yardsticks by which we measure progress and success

Will a herd of 120 cows return twice the profit of a 60 cow herd? Will the purchase of an extra 150 acres of land double the returns presently realized from a 150 acre farm? Will a new $75,000 combine pay back its extra cost over an older but still useful one?

Of course, these questions are all academic and can only be answered in the light of the circumstances surrounding them But they are the kind of questions facing dairy and other farmers every time a change is contemplated that will affect the size of an enterprize, or the size of ones income from it.

Pointing to "economies of scale", researchers and economists and even extension agents have been selling all kinds of evidence down through the years that the easier way to success is to get bigger.

Well, it's pretty hard to argue with facts — especially historical facts. When we look at the pure economics of bigness, there is no denying that over the past 50 years there has been a pronounced trend toward larger herds, more acres per farm, bigger and more productive — equipment, and consequently fewer and fewer people actually doing the work of feeding the rest.

This last statement is what has me worried. How far can this trend continue and where will it end?

At this point, you are going to anticipate a truth we've all heard many times Get Better Before you Get Bigger! Well, it is just as sound advice now as it was the first time you heard it. But lets examine it Is this advice for you?

Most County DHIA annual meetings are held this time of year, and we all like to examine the current statistics and pat ourselves on the back at last year's progress.

As an industry, we can be justly proud of the continuing rise in production per cow, number of cows on test, and in many cases in rise in profit over feed cost, which is also a deceptive figure

Our Lebanon County DHIA board gives special recognition to the herd which makes the most progress in milk production over the previous year. This year's recipient went from 16,000 pounds to over 19,000 pounds of milk per cow, and of course, the over-feed-cost also soared. Some kind of expansion might well be indicated and justified, providing he can maintain production somewhere in this high range. It's a good example of getting better before getting bigger.

From a strictly economic viewpoint, whether you are comparing the profitability of a herd producing 18,000 pounds of milk with a 15,000 pound herd, or matching a 15,000 pound average with a 12,000 pounder, the higher profit always goes with the higher herd average, in spite of higher feed costs. Higher profits don't always ac-

Turkey season extended three weeks

POTTSTOWN — The Pennsylvania Game Commission has extended this fall's turkey hunting season to three weeks statewide, ending November 22.

When seasons were established in June, the northcentral part of the state was scheduled for a three-week fall turkey season, while the rest of the state was scheduled for a two-week fall season.

However, the Game Commission at that time reserved the right to extend the season in case of an abundance of birds.

Pennsylvania probably has over 100,000 wild turkeys now, more than ever before in history

The fall turkey hunting season will end in Pennsylvania at sunset on Saturday, November 22.

company an expansion in cow numbers.

My favorite comparison is to look at the profitability of a 40 cow herd producing 18,000 pounds or above, and match it against a 90 cow herd producing 14,000 or 15,000 pounds. Considering the extra investment in cows and equipment for the larger herd, to say nothing of extra time and labor, the margin of profit for the larger herd is very small.

It's the management for efficient high production that makes the difference — not the size.

Now, lest we wander too far from the point of this discussion, lets look at another type of sticky by which progress can be measured. It has nothing to do with bigness or economic success. It has to do with peace of mind and stability of spirit

Progress and success should not be measured only by the yardstick of dollars invested and a hefty line of credit at the bank. Consider the value of a good night's sleep, freedom from ulcers, and shifting part of the burden of feeding the world on to a few more shoulders.

The fallacy of bigness mentioned earlier lies in the tremendous irony that only three percent of our population bears the burden of feeding the other ninety-seven percent, plus a large number of hungry mouths overseas.

Perhaps we should take a serious look at the trends toward bigness, and decide whether we can afford to load the burden on an ever smaller number of farmers who get bigger and more and more tired and frustrated.

Corn hits 6-year high; grain reserve called

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Farmers having corn in farmer-owned grain reserve I will have until February 1981 to repay their loans following call of the reserve last Friday, according to John Goodwin, acting executive vice president of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Although the reserve has been called, farmers are not required to sell the grain. The call requires them to repay their loans within 90 days of the date they are officially notified of the call. County offices of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service will officially notify producers whose loans have been called.

The reserve is being called because the national average market price for corn has been above the $3.15 per bushel reserve call level for five consecutive market days. The October 30 five-day averages price of $3.26 is the highest received by farmers since September 1974.

"Farmers who have corn in reserve have reaped higher prices because of their participation," Goodwin said. The present average price of corn is $1 more than the season average for 1978, $1.23 above 1977, and $1.10 more than 1976, he said. "This proves the value of the reserve to farmers, and shows that it is working as intended," he said.

Approximately 560 million bushesl of corn remain in reserves II and III. These reserves are in release status. Call level for those reserves is $3.26 per bushel.

Under the farmer-owned grain reserve program farmers are eligible to place feed grains and wheat into a reserve during periods of low prices. In return, farmers receive CCC price support loans on the grain in reserve as well as annual storage payments. If prices rise to the "release" level, farmers may repay the loan and market the crop without incurring a penalty.

The call level for corn under the reserve I program is 140 percent of the $2.25 per bushel national average loan rate, or $3.15. Data used by the CCC in determining the call level includes a daily report by the Agricultural Marketing Service which shows prices at selected markets.

The markets reviewed by CCC for corn are Chicago, Kansas City, Minneapolis, Omah and St. Louis.

Sheep producers hold meeting to set lamb quotas

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Representatives of the National Wool Growers Association met last Monday with officials of the Special Trade Negotiators Office in Washington to plan talks among the governments of the United States, New Zealand and Australia on an agreement to set a formula for the orderly importation of lamb into the United States.

"Actual negotiations are still down the road," said Daniel Murphy, director of government affairs for NWGA, who, along with NWGA's Washington attorney William Silverman, represented the wool growers at the meeting. "But we have set the process in motion, and we believe that both the New Zealand and Australian governments want to resolve this problem as badly as we do."

The Special Trade Negotiators Office is a division of the Executive Office of the President responsible for international trade agreements and policy.

In seeking government-to-government talks, the National Wool Growers Association is hoping to reach a voluntary agreement that will make a countervailing duty suit against New Zealand and Australia unnecessary.

"We are prepared to file the suit," Murphy said, "but we are steadfast in our belief that all other avenues of compromise must be exhausted before doing so."

In Burley, Idaho, NWGA board chairman Roscoe J. Rich emphasized an agreement among the three nations would not increase the price of lamb in the United States.

"In fact," Rich said, "it would probably have a stabilizing effect on the market by leveling the supply of lamb in this country and ensuring the orderly and predictable expansion of markets to other sections of the country.

"In no way are we seeking to block New Zealand and Australia from the domestic market," Rich said, "but only to make certain that our producers receive a stable and fair price for their product. The sheep industry in the United States is growing at an impressive rate, and with an orderly import policy, all lamb producers, foreign and domestic, will be able to grow and expand even faster."

The Special Trade Negotiators Office will now make initial contact with the New Zealand and Australian governments and develop a timetable by which the talks can proceed. The NWGA is hopeful that the talks can be concluded before the end of the year.

However, if the negotiations are unsuccessful, Murphy said, "We will pursue the countervailing duty suit and press for legislation in Congress next year to provide for a predictable flow of lamb into the United States."

Higher vegetable prices reflect smaller supplies

NEW HOLLAND — Smaller U.S. supplies of both fresh and processed vegetables this season point to higher prices for both producers and consumers.

Supplies of fresh vegetables for 1980 are approximately 10 percent smaller than last year, and processors have used about 11 percent less. Prices paid growers for fresh-market vegetables will advance seasonally this fall and average substantially higher than a year ago.

From now through the middle of next year, retail prices for processed vegetables will average moderately higher than last season, reflecting tighter supplies, higher processing costs, and increasing demand.

During the third quarter of 1980, the index of farm prices for fresh-market vegetables stood at 210 (1967=100), compared with 188 a year ago. The third quarter index of retail prices for fresh vegetables, at 231, was nine percent higher than a year ago. Similarly, the index of wholesale prices for 10 leading canned vegetables registered 211 in September, up nine percent from a year ago.

Acreage for fall production of 14 major fresh-market vegetables is estimated to be one percent less than during the fall quarter of 1979. Based on average yields for the past three years, the projection is 45.5 million cwt., four percent less than a year ago.

For the fall quarter there will be larger fresh supplies of snap beans, cauliflower, sweet corn, cucumbers, eggplant, and escarole-endive, but these will be more than offset by smaller supplies of broccoli, cabbage, carrots, celery, lettuce, green peppers, spinach, and tomatoes.

Among the processed vegetables, only canned beets, pickles, frozen broccoli, and frozen spinach will be in larger supply than a year ago.

Wholesale prices of canned vegetables declined slightly last fall and winter, reaching a low in March 1980 that was down three percent from a year earlier. In anticipation of smaller packs and supplies, prices began to rise in April and by this September were nine percent higher than a year ago.

The supply-price picture is essentially the same for frozen vegetables – supplies will be down during 1980-81 and prices will be substantially higher. Prices for frozen vegetables will be relatively higher than for canned because of higher marketing costs.

With a smaller crop of all potatoes in prospect - about 12 percent less than in 1979 and well below the 1978 record - grower prices have increased have been higher than a year ago, reflecting substantially smaller crops of spring and summer potatoes. Prices to growers for the fall crop are expected to remain relatively high, possibly between $4.25 and $4.75 per cwt., up from $3.24 a year ago.

The smaller crop will meet with generally good demand in both the fresh and processing markets. Exports of frozen and dehydrated potatoes to Japan and the Pacific Rim countries will probably hold steady, but sales to the European Community will decline somewhat because sluggish economic activity there is expected to reduce demand for all agricultural imports.

U.S. consumption of fresh potatoes rebounded in 1979 to 52.8 pounds per person, from 47.7 pounds a year earlier. Annual consumption of processed potatoes declined to 65.5 pounds per person, a drop of about five pounds: consumption of frozen potatoes fell 3.3 pounds and that of dehydrated potatoes fell nearly two pounds.

The 1980 crop of dry beans is 17 percent larger than last year and 27 percent larger than in 1978. Exports are a major influence on prices of dry beans. Even with a larger crop, the strong export demand for pintos and other colored beans is expected to continue, with Mexico the main customer.

CALF STARTENA® Promotes Rumen Development... Adds Up To 15% More Growth In The First 60 Days, Compared To A Conventional Calf Starter Ration.

Nothing gets calves growing faster than Calf Startena. Why? As a result of new information in rumen research, Purina found a way to make the protein and energy in dry feed more available. So calves make a more efficient use of Calf Startena...turning more of it into true body development.

The result is an increase in feed efficiency of up to 12%. And up to 15% faster growth rate. That's compared to a conventional calf starter.
